BANKERS BLAME DOWNSTATE FOR JUSTICE DELAYS

Protest Respites to Three Slayers.

Three convicted murderers heard the death sentence passed upon them in Judge Robert E. Gentzel's court in April, 1929. Tomorrow, after a seventeen month interval marked by a score of stays of execution, two Supreme court hearings, three insanity trials, and intercessions to the governor, the board of pardons and paroles will give the trio a second hearing on a plea for clemency.

The Chicago and Cook County Bankers' association yesterday voiced a vigorous protest against this "woeful delay of justice" and against any further delay in sending the three men, who shot down a bank employe in a daylight robbery, to the electric chair.

Praise Speed of Trial.

"This is a case in which Chicago did its duty promptly and efficiently in bringing the killers to justice," said E. M. Baty, executive secretary of the bankers' association. "The murderers were captured within 48 hours of their crime, indicted in five days, and tried, convicted and sentenced less than three months later. "Since then, downstate agencies have helped the bandits to escape punishment. Complaint has often been made downstate that Chicago cannot solve its crime problem. Here is an instance in which Chicago is being impeded in punishing its criminals by hindrance over which it has no control."

How Crime Was Committed.

On Jan. 15, 1929, six Negroes armed with revolvers and shotguns walked into the Franklin Trust and Savings bank, 35th street and Michigan avenue, according to a history of the crime detailed by the association. Martin B. French, 70 years old, a Negro watchman, pulled his gun and fired at the bandits. They directed their fire at him and he fell, fatally wounded. The bandits wantonly fired other shots wounding a cashier and an assistant cashier and endangering the lives of about twenty customers, most of them Negroes, who were in the bank. They escaped with $800.

Two days later, detective squads raided a south side building and captured all the bandits. They confessed to the killing and more than sixty other robberies. The grand jury returned an indictment on Jan. 23, charging all six with murder, after a large number of witnesses had identified them.

Three Given Death Penalty.

Through the efforts of the state's attorney, the men were brought to trial before Judge Gentzel on April 17 and eight days later a jury found Lafron Fisher, Leonard Shadlow, and Leon Brown guilty of murder and fixed their punishment as death in the electric chair. Three other defendants were given life imprisonment.

Up to this point, the association statement commented, splendid efficiency had been shown by the police, prosecutors, jury and judge in meting out a prompt penalty for the killing. The lengthy story of continuances and delays started when the case passed from the Chicago courts.

"Five stays were granted during the summer to permit the state Supreme court to pass on the case," declared the statement. "A bill of objections was delivered to the Supreme court on July 16, 1929. It was not until eight months later, on March 12, that the Supreme court finally acted and affirmed the death sentence. Despite this eight months delay, the Supreme court one month later further complicated and delayed the case by allowing a rehearing.

Court Puts in Year on Case.

"Four months later, in July, 1910, the judgement and action of the lower court was reaffirmed for the second time by the Supreme court. It had taken nearly a year for the Supreme court to pass upon a case which required but eight days to handle in Judge Gentzel's court."

After a writ of habeas corpus, filed in the Criminal court of Cook county, had been speedily denied petitions were filed in behalf of each of the defendants, alleging that they had become insane. At subsequent hearings each of the men was found by a jury to be sane. The association statement continued:

"In July, the pardon and parole board heard the case and, after listening to all the evidence, voted unanimously against any clemency being shown the defendants. Gov. Emmerson's secretary stated before this first hearing that the governor was always guided by what the parole board did

CUBS WIN, 4-2; TAKE 2ND PLACE AS ROBINS LOSE

Gabby Hartnett's home run with Heathcote on first base in the ninth inning enabled the Cubs to beat the Braves yesterday, 4 to 2. Brooklyn lost to Pittsburgh, 7 to 6, and the Cubs now hold second place by one game. St. Louis was idle, so the Cardinals' lead over the Cubs was reduced to 2½ games. Score:

2 GUNMEN CALL ATTORNEY TO HIS DOOR; OPEN FIRE

Reason for Attack Is Mystery.

Two gunmen tricked their way into an apartment building at 129 North Central avenue early this morning and attempted to assassinate Samuel Aronfeld, one of the second floor tenants, who is an attorney with offices at 19 South La Salle street.

The two assassins opened fire on Mr. Aronfeld when he opened the door of his apartment, and one of the bullets grazed his body, inflicting a flesh wound. He was taken to Frances Willard hospital by the Austin police. The lawyer's wife, Mrs. Rose Aronfeld, who was standing just inside the doorway of the apartment, escaped injury. The gunmen fled down the stairway and escaped in an automobile parked at the curb.

Unable to Explain Attack.

Mr. Aronfeld, when questioned at the hospital by Police Lieutenant Samuel Peterson, insisted that he had no known enemies and that he knew of no possible explanation for the attack. He declared that his practice was principally of civil cases and that he had no racketeers or known criminals among his clients.

Possible light on the motive for the attack came through the questioning of Mrs. Aronfeld by Sergt. Walter O'Connell at the Austin station. Mrs. Aronfeld said that her husband had an altercation recently with a client who demanded that the lawyer return a fee.

"I don't know what it was all about, but this client became abusive," said Mrs. Aronfeld. "My husband also told me that somebody at the Chicago Bar association had called him up the other day and threatened some kind of proceedings against him."

Story of the Shooting.

Mr. Aronfeld is 30 years old. In telling of the shooting Mrs. Aronfeld said she and her husband had spent the evening with friends. They had been home only a few minutes when the door bell rang. "It's the Western Union," said the voice through the speaking tube, and despite the protests of his wife Mr. Aronfeld opened the door to admit the supposed messenger.

The instant the door opened one of the two men standing upon the stairway shouted, "That's him! Shoot him!" The two then emptied their pistols in the direction of the lawyer and fled.

Three Wait in Auto.

A neighbor of Aronfeld told police of seeing a strange automobile parked in front of the building for an hour before the attorney and his wife returned home.

Descriptions of three men who were seated in the car were furnished police, who believe the car to have been that of the assassins. One of the strangers gruffly gave the order to "Mind your own business" when a curious tenant of the building approached the car, the informant told police.

TRAITOR ARNOLD MONUMENT SET UP IN NEW YORK

Haverstraw, N. Y., Sept. 21.—(AP)—A monument perpetuating the memory of a traitor was unveiled today.

Three boulders surmounted by a revolutionary war cannon and bearing a tablet now mark the spot on which Benedict Arnold, then a major general in the continental army, met Maj. John Andre, the British spy, and arranged to sell out the American army and turn West Point over to the English.

The monument was erected by the Rockland County Historical society. Frank E. Stripe, New York lawyer, delivered the unveiling oration.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Mrs. Bertha Baur, returning from a gay summer abroad that included a bow at the court of St. James', will reach her home at 1511 Astor street within the next few days, perhaps in time for a melancholy rite—the double funeral of George Brown, her trusted retainer for many years, and his wife, Martha.

Advanced years and a failing heart ended the life of the old butler early yesterday. Two hours after Brown's death his widow ended her life by leaping from the fire escape outside their rooms at 1449 North La Salle street.

Monitor of Baur Household.

Since the days when Rosemary Baur, a debutante of last year, was a baby George Brown had officiated as guardian at the front door of the Baur home and as grand vizier at the numerous social functions for which it was noted. His was the dignity of the old school, the suavity of manner that comes with experience, the confidence of social wisdom.

Up to five years ago Brown was monitor of the household. Then he retired on a pension, at the age of 75. He and his wife, Martha, who for years had been deaf, led a quiet and contented life in their La Salle street rooms. George returned occasionally to his old post in the Baur home to counsel and direct when an entertainment was in progress. His last such experience was at a debut reception for Rosemary Baur.

Couple United in Death.

Early yesterday Mrs. Brown, weeping, summoned a fellow roomer at the La Salle street address. George, who was 80 years old, had died in bed. When it was apparent that he could not be resuscitated, Mrs. Brown fumbled her way distractedly out onto the fire escape, which is guarded by an iron railing.

They found her shortly afterward, crushed and still on the cement below the window. Friends recalled her frequent assertions that she could not live if her husband died before her.

An inquest will be held this afternoon in the undertaking rooms at 245 West North avenue. Mrs. Baur and Rosemary are aboard the liner Bremen on their way to America.

Five Horses Perish as Flames Destroy Stable

Five work horses were burned to death when the stable in which they were kept, in the rear of 4320 Elston avenue, was destroyed by fire yesterday. Paul Schleir, 4316 North Springfield avenue, the owner, said that the fire may have been started by a cigaret and placed the damage at $1,800.

MAID "BORROWS" $100,000 JEWELRY; GOES A-STEPPING

When Lois Hyde, a comely maid in the home of Max J. Mauermann, a coal merchant residing at 6732 Crandon avenue, went out stepping early this morning, she bedecked herself in something like $100,000 worth of jewels belonging to her mistress, Mrs. Bernadine Mauermann. As a result she was robbed of $20,000 worth of the gems and the rest are in the hands of a policeman while she is in a police station cell.

Lois had a "date" for 1 o'clock this morning and, after "borrowing" the jewels in the absence of the Mauermanns, she went to Riley's cafe, 1047 West Erie street. On arrival there, according to her story, she was told by Leonardo Laino, the bartender, that she could not be served drinks without an escort. He offered, however, to take her to another place a block away. As they walked along the street he admired the diamond ring she was wearing, and took it from her. Just then an automobile with a man and a woman as occupants drove up, and robbed Laino of the ring, and Miss Hyde of a tie pin belonging to Mauermann valued at $10,000, and $50 of her own money.

She hailed a cab and was taken to the loop. On Michigan avenue she saw South Park Policeman William Sullivan and called him to her. Thrusting into his hands a diamond necklace, a bracelet, and a lot of other jewelry, said to be worth $80,000, she told him she had stolen them and demanded that he arrest her. He did so.

Robs Theater; Flashlight His Only 'Weapon'

A bandit yesterday engineerd a successful holdup at the United Artists' theater 45 West Randolph street, with a pocket flashlight as his only weapon until, when the job was about completed, he happened to find a revolver on the desk of the assistant manager, Maxwell Blick, 6751 Jeffery avenue.

His entry was made just as Hugh Flannery, 503 North State street, was opening the front doors for the first show. With his hand in his right coat pocket, he said, "Stick them up." Flannery obeyed and marched before him to the cashier's cage, where Miss Dorothy Huss was forced to hand over a small amount in the till and accompany them.

Next were lined up Donald Jameson, a messenger; Roy Lewis, an usher; George North, assistant chief of service; Roy McKee, engineer; F. C. Oswald, an operator; Andrew Sorenson, an electrician and Tony Morello, a stage hand. They were marched upstairs to Mr. Blick's office. The latter was sitting at his desk, with his revolver, but put up his hands. The bandit then traded the flashlight for the gun.

Mr. Blick was forced to open a safe, which yielded $710. The bandit then had one of his victims truss up all the employés except Blick and Johnson. He marched them south in Dearborn street to Washington, where a passing cab was hailed. The two men were driven to Narragansett and Berteau avenues, where they were dumped out and the bandit drove away.

He Has Reason to Disappear, Says Official

The disappearance of Hazel K. Groves, treasurer of Lake county, Indiana, and wealthy banker, of whom no trace has been obtained for three days, assumed a new aspect last night when Thomas S. Barr, deputy chief of the state banking department, said: "Groves had plenty of reasons to leave."

Mr. Burr refused to amplify the statement. He is now engaged in supervising the examination of the American State bank of East Chicago, of which Mr. Groves is president. He intimated that the examination would be completed by tonight and that he would then have "something further to say." The bank was closed as a precautionary measure following Mr. Groves' disappearance.

Friends Fear Violence.

Some authorities held the theory that Mr. Groves had been the victim of violence. They believed that otherwise he would at least have communicated with his family. Business associates and friends maintained the opinion that the banker and political leader had no apparent reason for a voluntary disappearance and either was being forcibly detained or had been slain.

Daniel Kreitzman, chief deputy to the county treasurer, said yesterday that he had completed a cursory examination of Mr. Groves' books as county treasurer and had found no discrepancy. He said, however, that he would request the state board of accounts to make a complete audit.

Deputy Treasurer Mystified.

Mr. Kreitzman, who has been chief deputy treasurer during four administrations, said he handled virtually all the office work and felt sure Mr. Groves could not have misappropriated any funds without his knowledge. He was unable to offer any explanation for the treasurer's absence.

An examination of Mr. Groves' personal accounts, authorities said, indicated he had not touched them for two weeks. No unusually heavy withdrawals were shown.

Authorities were perplexed by their failure to get any trace of Mr. Groves' Cadillac automobile, in which the missing official was last seen as he left his home, 4725 Northcote avenue, East Chicago, on Friday morning. The automobile, a tan coupe, bore the official star of Lake county and the 1930 Indiana license No. 674.

Planning a Bank Merger.

Mr. Groves was to have attended a bank directors' meeting at 10 a. m. on Friday, but failed to appear. That night, in the wake of his continued absence, the directors decided to close the bank to forestall any unfavorable reaction after news of the president's absence became known.

Mr. Groves had carried on negotiations for merging his bank with the East Chicago State bank right up to the day of his disappearance and the merger probably would have been completed in a day or two on a share for share basis, it was understood.

There was a suggestion that political enmities Mr. Groves might have incurred could perhaps have led to an abduction or killing.

Leader in County Politics.

Mr. Groves had been one of the Republican leaders in his city and county for many years. He had supported the administration of Dr. Raleigh P. Hale as mayor of East Chicago. Several months ago Dr. Hale resigned after his indictment and conviction for conspiracy to violate the federal dry laws.

Mr. Groves was about to retire from public office, his second term as treasurer expiring on Dec. 31. He had supported the successful candidacy of Chief Deputy Kreitzman for the Republican nomination to succeed him.

CHICAGO GRAIN BOARD STARTS SOVIET INQUIRY

Hyde Reveals More Russian Sales.

The business conduct committee of the Chicago Board of Trade this afternoon will undertake a "thorough and careful" investigation of the operations of Russian grain trading interests on the Chicago exchange. According to charges made last week by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, Russia has been a heavy short seller of wheat with the intention of depressing the price and injuring American farmers.

Yesterday in Washington Secretary Hyde amplified his charges by declaring that the department of agriculture had uncovered evidence of additional short sales by Russian interests.

Joseph W. Badenoch, chairman of the business conduct committee of the Board of Trade, returned last night from a vacation in Wisconsin. He announced that his committee would institute a searching inquiry into the facts concerning the operations of the All-Russian Textile syndicate of New York, identified as the soviet agency sponsoring the short selling.

Committee to Meet Today.

Mr. Badenoch said the business conduct committee had had the situation under consideration for a week or ten days, but said he would not express an opinion until after the committee meeting, which is to be held in the offices of the Board of Trade at 3 p. m. today.

John A. Bunnell, president of the Board of Trade, said he expected to receive from Secretary Hyde of the department of agriculture all the facts the government possesses regarding the grain trading operations of the Russian concern, and in addition would ascertain the character of the transactions which had taken place on the Chicago exchange. Mr. Bunnell asserted that the business conduct committee had broad powers in obtaining information and would exert every effort to make a complete inquiry.

Charges Plot to Hurt Farmer.

Secretary Hyde, in calling the Russian short selling activity to the attention of the Chicago exchange, said the transactions had not been based upon "even a remote possibility of delivery upon the Chicago market or in the United States" and had the effect of "manipulating the prices downward against every farmer who has sold his wheat since the short sales were executed."

The secretary said the government was not authorized to regulate trading by the soviets on the Chicago exchange and placed the "whole matter up to the conscience of the trader and the rules of the exchange"

View of Grain Traders.

On the other hand, members of the exchange pointed out, the grain markets are open to the world and they expressed the belief that the government should not place the responsibility on the exchange.

These traders said there is always a large foreign interest heuging in grain here, and some were of the opinion that it either was legal for Russia to participate in such business or it was not, and it was up to the government to determine the soviet status.

Members of the business conduct committee besides Chairman Badenoch are H. H. Lobdell, Lester N. Perrin, A. W. Mansfield, and Joseph Jackson.

HYDE RENEWS ATTACK

Washington, D. C., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde in another sharply worded statement today added new fuel to the controversy over short selling of wheat by soviet Russia on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Seizing upon the explanations offered by E. V. Belitzky, president of the All Russian Textile syndicate, who said in New York yesterday that the soviet trading was a legitimate transaction which has been exaggerated, Mr. Hyde asserted that the Russian representatives by their own admissions proved the trading to be on a larger scale than was heretofore known. He declared that "a more extended investigation is now necessary."

Calls on Exchanges to Act.

The secretary also renewed his demand that the Board of Trade take action in the matter, expressing the hope that "the futures exchanges of this country, on their own initiative, will have sufficient foresight and public spirit to make such changes in their rules as may be necessary.'"

The original charge of Secretary Hyde was that the soviet government, through the textile syndicate, had sold short 5,000,000 bushels of wheat with a resultant depression of prices. Mr. Belitzy described the sales "as the usual hedging operation of a purely business nature," and said that Mr. Hyde's estimate was "a little exaggerated," although the operations had extended over a period of several months.

"Mr. Belitzky is reported by the papers this morning as saying that 'Mr. Hyde's estimate of 5,000,000 bushels' as the amount of soviet Russia's short sales is 'a little exaggerated,'" declared the secretary today.

Cites Sales of Four Days.

"That estimate was obtained from Mr. Belitzky's own company. It has proved to be, as he says, incorrect. Our investigations show that on four days short sales by the soviet government, through three brokers, amounted to over 7,500,000 bushels of wheat. Thus actual sales already uncovered overrun Mr. Belitzky's estimate by a little more than 50 per cent.

"It is strange that the president of the All Russian Textile syndicate does not know within two and a half million bushels how much wheat he has actually sold.

"We are further indebted to Mr. Belitzky for his statement that the operations 'were carried on over a period of several months.' The All Russian Textile syndicate had assured us that their sales were confined to the last fortnight. Our investigation covered only that period. A more extended investigation is now necessary.

Effect on Price Trend.

"Mr. Belitzky also says that the sales of soviet Russia 'could not appreciably affect the trend of prices because the turnover on the Chicago Board of Trade is from 50 to 60 million bushels a day.'

"The answer is found in the course of prices during the four days covered by the sales so far identified. Those four days are Sept. 8, 9, 10, and 11. On Sept. 8 May wheat opened on the Chicago board at 99⅛, or 1⅛ cents above the previous close. The price dropped during the day and closed at 96⅛, or on the bottom and down 2⅞ cents.

"During the four days, the market on May wheat dropped from the opening of 99⅛ to the close on Sept. 11 at 94⅛, a decline of 5 cents. Comparable declines were registered in all the other wheat futures."

Mr. Hyde said that the soviet sales were probably not responsible for all of this drop but insisted that these sales, added to other bear factors, "contributed greatly to a bear psychology which depressed the market."

Sees Some Unusual Aspects.

"The whole matter presents several unusual aspects," he continued. "Here is a foreign government selling wheat short in a market to which it can never, under any possibility, make delivery. Freight and tariff absolutely forbid delivery. This, their representatives say, is a legitimate hedging operation, but they do not seem to know by 50 per cent how many bushels they are hedging."

Mr. Hyde renewed and elaborated his previous declaration that while soviet representatives in this country are theoretically selling wheat the Russian people are suffering from lack of food.

"Not the least striking feature of these unique operations is the fact that, so far from having wheat to sell and thus to hedge, the Russian government is rationing its people and doling out food on food cards. No white bread is available to Russians except to children under 10 years of age. Industrial workers may have from one-half to three-fourths of a pound of rye bread a day, their children only one-fourth pound each day. No butter is available except to children, and only one-eighth of a pound a week to them.

"Duty to Expose Deals."

"It is not my province to pass judgment upon policies of foreign governments. If they elect to sell wheat abroad at a time when they find it necessary to ration their own people and to shoot men for forging food cards that is their business. Nor is it within my power to discern their motives in bearing American markets.

"But it is my province and my duty to expose such transactions and insist that American institutions be so regulated as to make such transactions impossible. I hope the futures exchanges of this country on their own initiative will have sufficient foresight and public spirit to make such changes in their rules as may be necessary."

Following the issuance of his statement, Secretary Hyde took an afternoon train for Ann Arbor. He was accompanied by his daughter, Caroline, who will attend the University of Michigan, of which Mr. Hyde is an alumnus. The secretary planned to return by way of Chicago, and while there he may make a first hand inquiry into the activities of the Board of Trade in response to his suggestions.

EUROPEAN COUNTRIES CHARGE RUSSIA IS UPSETTING MARKETS

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Evidence of soviet sabotage in grain markets of the world has been received in recent reports from Rotterdam.

This year, the reports say, soviet barley was sold in Duesseldorf at 6 florins, and then the market was repeatedly depressed by dumping at stated intervals further quantities at 5.50 florins, 5 florins, and 4.80 florins, until the market was demoralized and many grain importers financially injured. Then Russian supplies ceased.

In Italy the same method was followed in marketing wheat, according to dispatches. Canada had a large export wheat trade with Italy. Last spring the soviet government dumped several wheat cargoes into Italy, broke the market and closed it to Canadian wheat. When this was accomplished Russian wheat exports to Italy ceased, but Canadiian trade in this commodity had been disrupted.

Dumping in Baltic Markets.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 21.—Manufacturers' associations, chambers of commerce and also individual groups of traders such as timber, flax and grain dealers met in the capitals of the Baltic states during the last week, demanding that their governments act against the dumping policy of the soviet government trade monopoly which has shattered the stability of the Baltic markets.

The soviets are exporting a wide variety of raw and semi-manufactured products which are dumped in Baltic states at prices threatening to ruin local industries and traders.

A general boycott of all soviet goods is waged in the Baltic states as the soviet exports threaten their basic industries. None of them will be able to balance its budget if soviet dumping continues.

BISHOP GRISWOLD REGAINS HEALTH; CONDUCTS RITES

For the first time since last spring Bishop Sheldon Munson Griswold, head of the local Episcopal diocese, yesterday officiated at services. He administered the rite of confirmation to a class of candidates at the Cathedral Shelter, Washington boulevard and Peoria street. Shortly after Bishop Griswold's election as successor to the late Bishop Charles P. Anderson last February the Chicago prelate became dangerously ill and for a time it was thought that he could not survive. However, after three months' convalescence at his summer lodge at Richard's Landing, Ontario, Bishop Griswold has returned with his health much improved and is again able to assume the leadership of the diocese.

in such cases and on July 11 the chief clerk of the parole board wrote Sheriff Traeger that Gov. Emmerson had denied clemency to the defendants. Of the many dates set for the execution of these men, Sept. 5 was the latest. On that day, Gov. Emmerson granted them a further stay until Oct. 3.

Twenty Months of Delay.

"The crime was committed a year ago last winter. Twenty months have elapsed. The defendants, men with criminal records who confessed to the crimes and were positively identified and found guilty by an impartial jury, have not yet been punished. Nearly a year and a half ago, the jury, after hearing all the evidence, returned a verdict of guilty and fixed the punishment of three at death and three at life imprisonment. The sentences have not been carried out."

"Is it surprising," remarked Mr. Baty, "that crime is rampant in Chicago when justice is so woefully delayed as it has been in this case? It is charged, and apparently properly so, that political motives have contributed much to the delay. Rumors are current that further delays must be expected—political fortunes are at stake—perhaps justice may not be done until the election is out of the way."

Judge Gives Statement.

When Judge Gentzel, the trial judge, was asked for a statement by the parole board at the first hearing, he said, according to the statement: "If ever there was a case in which the laws of the state should be enforced, this is the case. In my opinion, there is not a single, mitigating circumstance for the granting of the application."

This was not a case where the Negro race might object to the prosecution on the ground that racial prejudices was responsible for the penalty meted out, Mr. Baty pointed out.

"The man murdered was a Negro," he said. "More than twenty Negroes were in danger when the bullets of the bandits were flying. Responsible Negro citizens are just as anxious to see justice done in this case as the most zealous prosecutor.

"If the parole board again delays the sentence and these three men are not electrocuted on the next execution date, Oct. 3, crime in Chicago will have scored a victory and Chicago itself will not have been responsible."

WILD Horses couldn't drag me there if they weren't really $14 shoes for $10

"I won't wear an ordinary $10 shoe because I'm hard on shoes. I'm fussy, too, about style and fit; I like the knowledge that I'm wearing the best. It isn't that I have any false pride, but I've always thought that I couldn't get what I was looking for unless I paid a price that seemed standardized around $14. Then I found Hassel's!

"I've licked the game. My shoes only cost $10 now. I don't know how they do it. They tell me it's because they sell more high grade, custom made, men's shoes than any other shoe store in America; because they buy for less and sell from a low rent Dearborn Street location. Maybe so. I'll take their word for that. And you can take my word for this: Wild horses couldn't drag ten dollars out of me unless I was getting the kind of shoe I've been paying $14 for."

11 DROWN AT SEA AS GALE WHIPS COAST OF FRANCE

Ships Limp Into Port with Rigging Smashed.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Nine sailors and a woman and baby are known to have perished in an equinoctial gale along the French Atlantic seaboard and channel coast that appeared to be blowing itself out late tonight.

Winds at times reached a velocity of 80 to 100 miles an hour and left behind them a trail of damage and desolation after blowing for about 80 hours.

The full tale of the disaster has not yet been unfolded, many wires having been blown down. But the western coasts of France were strewn with wreckage today.

Seventeen ships had taken refuge this evening in Cherbourg roads. Twelve were sheltered at Brest and 7 more at Lorient, on the south coast of Brittany. Many of these craft had lost their rigging or other bridges, swept away by wind and heavy seas.

Worst Storm in 30 Years.

The Greek steamer Theodorus Bulgaris, 2,767 tons, which sailed from Istanbul on Aug. 11, was abandoned and left drifting in the Bay of Biscay in latitude 46.45 north, longitude 6.40 west, straight in the path of ships plying between channel ports and Gibraltar and South Africa.

Two of its crew were drowned before the steamer British Advocate succeeded in taking off those on board. The French liner Rochambeau spent 11 hours standing by to be of assistance. When the Rochambeau reached Havre today, the captain reported the storm was one of the worst he had encountered in his 30 years at sea.

Another freighter, the Italian U. Vivaldi, 2,762 tons, was towed into the port of Brest, waterlogged. It was salvaged by the ocean going tug Iroise.

Man Swept Overboard.

The British steamer Illingsworth reached Havre Roads today with her flag at halfmast. Her third engineer had been swept off the deck by a wave in the Bay of Biscay Saturday.

The trawler Notre Dame docked at Boulogne with two survivors of the Dutch schooner Fouxhod, which sank in the channel yesterday. The master of the Fouxhod, his wife and their two year old baby perished.

A cabin boy, whose name was given as Urvoy, was killed aboard the American freighter Oregon when a steel cable snapped while the ship was drifting away from the breakwater at Havre.

Though the loss of life was comparatively small, the material loss is exceptionally heavy. Countless fishing boats and other small craft were torn by the gale from their moorings and wrecked.

At Quiberon, southern Brittany, the damage done to the harbor is estimated at a million francs. At many seaside resorts in Brittany and Normandy all the bathhouses were demolished and the board walks were torn up.

Much Damage Inland.

The fury of the storm was felt throughout almost all of France. Innumerable chimneys were blown down in inland cities. Trees were uprooted and tiles were torn off roofs.

Though the winds were subsiding toward midnight, the seas were still running mountain high, ports from Dunkirk in the north to Bayonne in the Bay of Biscay were still crowded with battered and storm bound ships of all sorts and sizes.

English Storm Abates.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(AP)—A gale that had whipped the channel and the southwestern coasts of England for 24 hours largely blew itself out during the night and today. Reports of damage to shipping, however, continued to reach London.

The steamer Chesham, 4,295 tons, from the River Plate with a cargo of maize, asked for assistance off the western coast of Ireland. She was lying helpless with her steering gear smashed.

The steamer Umberleigh, 2,919 tons, which went ashore on the rocks near Plymouth, has been refloated, but is badly damaged.

The liner Montcalm, bound from Southampton to Quebec, Canada, felt the full force of the channel gale, but halted for several hours to play her searchlights on the Umberleigh until another ship came up to the rescue. The Montcalm reached Cobh, Irish Free State, 15 hours behind schedule.

Find Inca King's Treasure in Ecuador Mountain Cave

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Sept. 21.—Guarded by a tribe of 700 Indians in a mountain fastness of the Andes, the fabulous treasure and remains of Atahualpa, the last and one of the richest kings of the Incas, has been discovered, according to Julio Torres, a lawyer of Rio Bamba and leader of a party of treasure hunters.

The discovery was reported by the Indian village of Nizac, near Alausi, and Señor Torres has requested the minister of the treasury to lend soldiers to protect the diggers from the Indians, who probably guarded the secret location as sacred.

Find Inca Idol.

The prospectors last November discovered a cave in a mountain pass at Azuay, containing an Inca idol and skeletons, which convinced them that they were on the trail of the Inca treasure collected as part of the enormous ransom Francisco Pizarro, conqueror of the Incas, demanded for the life of King Atahualpa.

When a prisoner of the conquistadores in 1533, Atahualpa offered Pizarro to fill his cell with treasure as high as he could reach his hand on the wall if his life were spared. At the command of their king the Incas brought treasure from all parts of the vast empire, and it is estimated that $15,000,000 in gold plate and jewels had been paid when Pizarro broke his promise and murdered Atahualpa.

The Incas then concealed the balance of the treasure intended as ransom in the mountains, and for centuries adventurers have been vainly searching for it.

Takes Fortune to Spain.

Many years ago Juan Valverde, a poor Spaniard, married to an Indian girl, is supposed to have learned the location of this hidden treasure, as he suddenly became immensely wealthy. He returned to Spain taking the fortune and secret with him, but when he died he gave the king of Spain directions for finding the treasure.

The trail described by Alverde has been followed by many treasure hunters, but they always lost it in the Margasitas mountain. The trail was followed in 1857 as far as Margasitas by Richard Spruce, English botanist, who reported that up to that point Valverde's directions "corresponded perfectly with the locality and landmarks."

If the treasure is actually recovered there is a possibility of controversy as to ownership, as the government is likely to demand a share and descendants of Cara, the princess mother of Atahualpa, are said to live in the village of Varuquies, near Rio Bamba.

Humble Family Descendants.

Five centuries ago, when the Inca king, Huayna Capac, came from Cuzco and conquered the reigning house of Caras, he married a daughter of Stain, king of Carcas. This princess was the mother of Atahualpa and from this line of royal Caras, the Duchicelas, an humble Indian family of Yaruquies, are said to be descendants.

KILLED IN 213 FT. JUMP TO HUDSON FOR STUNT SHOW

New York, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Norman J. Terry, 24, a professional high diver and parachute jumper, of Kittanning, Pa., was killed today in a leap from the partly constructed Hudson river bridge to the water, 213 feet. Police said the leap was under the sponsorship of a daily paper and motion picture concern.

Clad in a bathing suit, Terry walked along a catwalk, poised for a time on a cable in midair, and then dived. For nearly 200 feet his body held a vertical position, but then he lost his equilibrium, was snapped into a horizontal posture, and struck the water flat on his back.

Two speedboats, bearing his manager, photographers, and reporters, picked him up. At a hospital he was pronounced dead of a broken back.

One of Terry's successful thrillers took place in Chicago when he walked a slack wire 500 feet in the air from the Carbon and Carbide building to the Mather tower.

REVELERS KILL PEACEMAKER IN THEIR QUARREL

Youth Shot to Death in Roadhouse Fight.

John E. Sowinski, 25 years old, 4636 North Leamington avenue, was shot and fatally wounded early yesterday morning, apparently while he was making an effort to make peace in a quarrel between several drunken men outside the Spaghetti inn, 4420 Natchez avenue.

Several witnesses told county highway police that the quarrel involved Miss Nettie Stance, 18 years old, 6500 Montrose avenue, a member of Sowinski's party.

Slain as He Interferes.

Besides Sowinski and Miss Stance the party included Charles Ruddy, 4624 North Leamington avenue; Gerald Griffin, 4704 Giddings street, and Edward Ehrman, 4733 North Laramie avenue. They were departing and in front of the roadhouse they met a party from the Greenlight inn next door. Some one made a remark concerning Miss Stance which a member of her party resented, the police were told.

A fight started and Sowinski tried to interfere. A gun was discharged and Sowinski fell with a bullet through the breast. He was taken to the Chicago State hospital where he died.

Hunt Owners of Roadhouse.

The police are seeking Bennie Fill, 45 years old, 641 North Troy street, part owner of the Spaghetti inn, and his partner, Tom Jacobsen. It was learned that Fill changed his clothing shortly after the shooting and departed.

Miss Ella Jansen, 4415 North 64th court; Chorbald Henriksen, 4420 Neenah avenue, and Miss Stance were questioned yesterday. Miss Stance was released last night. Seven other witnesses were released earlier in the day.

PLATT, DEPEW AND CINDERS WON 1902 FIGHT

How Roads Staved Off Electrification.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
Article No. 2.

New York, Sept. 21.—[Special.]—In the historical perspective produced by the passage of nearly thirty years, the events leading to the electrification of the steam railroad terminals of New York City stand forth as dramatic episodes in the age-old struggle between the populace and entrenched privilege.

On the one hand was the public fighting to drive the tracks below ground and the smoke and cinder belching steam locomotives from the tracks, with the railroads footing the entire bill for the change. On the other hand were the railroads resisting, yielding little by little to what they characterized as the attempted despoliation of their property by conscienceless demagogues to further political interests.

The public won in the end, though not without making some concessions to the railroads and not till many a captain on each side had gone down with the scars of the thirty year war upon him.

Tunnel Disaster Big Impulse.

If to any one incident may be attributed the success of the movement for the electrification of the New York railroad terminals it was the Park avenue tunnel disaster on the New York Central in January, 1902. William K. Vanderbilt, J. P. Morgan the elder, and Senator Chauncey M. Depew saw the handwriting on the wall of the New York Central board room.

They knew they must electrify eventually; indeed, they asserted after the accident, which cost the lives of 17 persons, that Mr. Vanderbilt had approved partial electrification plans two days before the catastrophe. But they were determined to electrify in their own way and in their own time, in order to hold the cost down to the minimum.

The Pennsylvania railroad at this time was opening negotiations with the city for a terminal on Manhattan island to be reached by a long tunnel under the Hudson. The motive power from the terminal through the tunnel to a point well beyond its western end in New Jersey was to be electricity. If any Pennsylvania official had any notion at the time that the public would tolerate steam locomotives in the terminal he was disillusioned after the Park avenue tunnel accident.

Public Was Suspicious.

In the weeks following the accident the public was not satisfactorily impressed with the professed intentions of the New York Central to electrify. Hence there developed a movement to force electrification by legislative action, which grew like a snowball rolling down hill.

When the action was transferred to Albany there appeared on the scene the figure of a young fighting man to whom in after years Seth Low was to accord the chief credit for bringing about the electrification of the New York terminals. This man was Jonathan Mayhew Wainwright, who had just been elected to the assembly. Mr. Wainwright had served with distinction in the Spanish-American war. He was to serve with no less distinction in the world war, in which he won the D. S. M. and after which he was appointed assistant secretary of war, retiring from that position in 1923 to enter congress, from which he is now voluntarily retiring.

A First Class Fighting Man.

Young Wainwright proved a fighter in peace as well as in war. He was a New York lawyer, living at Rye, a suburb on the New Haven road that had contributed some of the victims of the Park avenue tunnel disaster. Rye, like all the other suburbs, was up in arms against the New York Central, which the commuters were denouncing as a soulless corporation twice a day, as they slammed the car window shut in the smoke and cinder choked Park avenue tunnel. Their denunciations were crystallizing in resolutions and memorials of mass-meetings petitioning the legislature to compel the company to remedy the conditions endangering life and limb in the approaches to its New York terminal.

Young Wainwright leaped to the leadership of the army of commuters storming the legislative citadel. His first shot was the introduction of a resolution providing for a legislative investigation of the tunnel disaster, which never got anywhere.

A Political Heretic.

Col. Wainwright, sitting in his law office the other day, a grizzled, bronzed veteran of war and politics, recalled from the mists of thirty years ago the memory of the tolerant or pitying disregard which he encountered in the legislature when he essayed a move that might be unwelcome to a powerful railroad.

At that time the railroads were in the saddle at Albany, at least in the legislative branch of the state government. Boss Tom Platt was in all his glory. He controlled the legislature. He was the colleague of Senator Depew at Washington. The railroads contributed handsomely to the New York Republican campaign funds distributed by Boss Platt. Senator Depew contributed handsomely whether of his own or of New York Central funds to the campaigns of senators, particularly members of the interstate commerce committee. Uncle Shelby Cullom, who was chairman of that committee, accepted Depew's contributions, but always insisted that Depew never asked a legislative favor therefor.

Resolution Is Buried.

Wainwright was unable to get a hearing on his investigation resolution from the assembly railroad committee, the majority of whose members had been named by Boss Platt and were amenable to his dictates. It looked for the moment as if the New York Central had nothing to fear in the legislative quarter. Boss Platt was on guard.

Mr. Wainwright could recall few of the details of the battle that ensued. I had to dig them out of the record. It appeared that after being rebuffed in the matter of the resolution, he returned to the fray with a bill introduced on Jan. 27, 1902, authorizing the state railroad commission to compel the New York Central to substitute electric for steam operation through the Park avenue tunnel by a date to be fixed by the regulatory body.

This proposed legislation was enthusiastically indorsed by the commuters in scores of suburban mass-meetings. The suburbs put pressure on their assemblymen to support the bill.

Mayor Low Supports It.

Mayor Seth Low of New York City came out for it on Feb. 4. The most important thing said the mayor, was to fix a date by which time the railroads should be required to complete electrification. He thought the date should be fixed in the legislation instead of being left to the discretion of the railroad commission.

By this time the Wainwright bill had enlisted such widespread popular support that none of Boss Platt's lieutenants in the assembly dared to pigeonhole it. Hearings were accorded the measure by the railroad committee. At the public hearing the New York Central opposed the bill, particularly with reference to the fixing of a time limit on electrification. In the light of engineering testimony presented by the commuters' organizations that two years were ample to allow, Wainwright amended his bill to fix Jan. 1, 1904, as the deadline on completion of the change in motive power.

Railroad Alarmed.

Such was the state of public feeling at the close of these hearings that the railroad directors were thoroughly alarmed. Particularly were they worried by the fact that Mayor Low, rich, influential, formerly president of Columbia university, whom Platt claimed to have made mayor, was lined up against them. There was a meeting on the crisis in the New York Central board room. It was decided that Morgan and Depew should see what could be done to detach the mayor from the forces supporting the Wainwright bill.

So, it fell out that on Feb. 18 Mr. Morgan and Senator Depew appeared by appointment at the mayor's office on a mysterious errand and were shown right in. The incident created a sensation. It was the first time that the most famous nose and the most illustrious mutton chop whiskers in America had ever been seen at the city hall. The reporters camped there till the callers emerged but got nothing but a reference to the mayor, who issued a statement that Mr. Morgan and Senator Depew had promised the coöperation of the railroad with the city on the electrification project.

Opposed to Time Limit.

It transpired years later that the two master minds of the New York Central had told Mayor Low that while the railroad was willing to electrify it was opposed to a two year, three year or any other time limit which would enable real estate pirates to hold them up for the additional ground they would need for the expanded terminal. Mr. Low was favorably impressed and forthwith asked Wainwright to agree to postponement of action on his bill, stating that as a result of the call of Messrs Morgan and Depew it looked as if "all would be able to get together."

Mayor Low was seeking to delay the legislation until after the submission of formal electrification proposals by the railroad company, which Mr. Morgan and Senator Depew had promised him would be forthcoming. Mr. Wainwright consented to a postponement of action for the time being.

Proposal Proves Vague.

Six days later the formal proposition of the company materialized in the shape of a letter to Mayor Low signed by Vanderbilt, Depew, Morgan, and six other directors of the New York Central, in which they protested against the move to compel electrification by law within a prescribed time, and promised that "in lieu of such legislative action" the company would proceed without delay to electrify its suburban service and would extend the electrification to the through service tracks "whenever a practical plan can be prepared which gives reasonable promise of producing satisfactory results."

Mr. Low immediately sent the letter to Chairman Bedell of the railroad committee of the assembly, with the observation that the communication from the company's directors constituted "a good foundation for the waiving of a fixed date" for electrification of the Park avenue tunnel.

"In any private relation of life," wrote Mr. Low, "the personal assurance of these gentlemen would be considered as being in every respect as good as their bond."

Wainwright Incensed.

In the meantime Wainwright had offered a substitute bill providing for electrification by May 1, 1905, and allowing the railroad commission to extend this time six months if necessary. Mayor Low's consent to waive the time limit Wainwright pronounced "an extraordinary and complete about face within a month."

The change of attitude on the part of Mayor Low doomed the Wainwright bill. Immediately after receiving Mr. Low's letter accepting the railroad proposal Chairman Bedell handed Wainwright a bill providing for electrification within three years unless the railroad commission should grant additional time, and asked that Wainwright introduce it. This bill was acceptable to the New York Central. Wainwright declined, and Bedell eventually induced Assemblyman Apgar, who had been Senator Depew's secretary, to father the measure, which was passed.

Two Bills Contrasted.

Wainwright contended that under his bill the company would be compelled to electrify within three years under penalty for noncompliance, whereas under the Apgar bill the railroad could continue to use steam in the tunnel indefinitely with impunity. He demanded why Mayor Low should be willing to "accept the personal, informal, and unofficial word of a few gentlemen who at present happen to be on the board of directors of the New York Central railroad in place of the state of New York in a matter of this urgency."

"At the bar of public opinion," Wainwright said in a speech to the assembly, "this company has been held responsible for the recent accident. It has been the subject of a presentment by a coroner's jury. For years the thousands of people who have passed through the tunnel have been placed in danger of their lives. Yet Mr. Low, in view of this record, is willing to let this matter rest upon the unofficial pledge of a few gentlemen who are now directors of the company."

Spokesmen for the railroad argued that the Wainwright bill was unreasonable and demagogic and that the Apgar bill represented the utmost compulsion justifiable in view of the difficulties the electrification project presented.

At the same time the New York Central was able to procure the passage of a bill granting it almost unlimited power to condemn adjoining property for the enlargement of its terminal. A great outcry went up against this measure, which was attacked as an unprecedented example of special privilege.

Gov. Odell, who had revolted from the Platt bossdom, vetoed the land condemnation bill, pronouncing it highly objectionable from the viewpoint of public interest. He also vetoed the Apgar electrification bill, on the ground that electrification was dependent upon enlargement of the terminal. Inasmuch as he had vetoed the land condemnation bill and thereby rendered electrification unfeasible he deemed it his duty "in justice to all concerned," he said to veto the electrification bill also.

So, the first session of the legislature following the tunnel accident ended with assurance of electrification resting solely upon the pledge of the company, without time limit.

Another article by Mr. Henning will appear in the near future.

AUTOGYRO TEMPTS TWO VISITS IN WEEK BY EDISON TO AIRPORT

New York, Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Thomas A. Edison today made his second visit within a week to the Newark metropolitan airport in order to watch the evolutions of two Pitcairn autogyros flown from the Pitcairn plant in Philadelphia by James Ray, vice president of the company, and James Faulkner, chief test pilot.

Mr. Edison climbed from his car and with vigorous step walked quickly to the side of the plane Ray had been flying. Ray then explained in detail the accomplishments of the autogyro and Mr. Edison said:

"Well you've got them so now that they will do anything but chew tobacco."

LOTTIE O'NEILL TO MANAGE HER OWN CAMPAIGN

Will Open Headquarters in Loop Today.

Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill of Downers Grove, independent dry candidate for the United States senate, announced last night that she would manage her own campaign and that she would open her campaign headquarters today at 166 West Jackson boulevard. Mrs. O'Neill issued a statement in which she said:

"The Illinois senatorial race is in reality a national issue and its results will determine whether or not this state will continue to aid President Hoover in his program for law enforcement.

Praises Lewis' Sincerity.

"My Democratic opponent, Col. James Hamilton Lewis, is an honest wet and is to be respected for his sincerity. Straightforwardness in one direction or the other is the only means of testing the sentiment of the people, and I challenge the dryness of any one who is not unalterably committed to the rigid enforcement of prohibition."

The Republican nominees, headed by Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, are scheduled to open their statewide speaking campaign at Mattoon today.

Besides Mrs. McCormick, the candidates who will speak are Richard Yates and Frank L. Smith, candidates for congressman at large; Francis G. Blair, candidate for reëlection as superintendent of public instruction, and Clarence F. Buck, nominee for state treasurer.

Every county outside of Cook is to be covered before the candidates return to the Chicago area for the final three weeks of the campaign.

Veterans Support Lewis.

A group of downstate world war veterans met at the Morrison hotel yesterday and organized the Illinois Veterans' league to support the candidacy of ex-Senator Lewis, a Spanish war veteran. The veterans also pledged their aid to Edward J. Barrett, world war veteran, for state treasurer. The veterans elected John H. Stelle of McLeansboro, past vice commander of the Illinois American Legion as chairman of the league.

[Mishkin Photo.]

New York, Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Irene Fenwick, wife of Lionel Barrymore, the actor, tonight entered Roosevelt hospital where it is reported she will undergo a delicate operation, the exact nature of which was not disclosed.

Miss Fenwick, who was Barrymore's leading woman in some of his most successful Broadway plays, married the brother of Ethel and John Barrymore in Rome on July 14, 1923, following his divorce by Doris Rankin in December, 1922. The couple continued to appear together in Broadway plays until Barrymore deserted the stage for the screen. Last year he announced he would devote his time henceforth to directing.

GIRL MAINTAINS GAIN IN "LUNG" FIGHT FOR LIFE

Yesterday, nine days after she was attacked by paralysis of the chest muscles due to infantile paralysis, Miss Frances McGann continued to maintain her slight advantage in the fight against death at St. Luke's hospital.

The Drinker respirator, the machine in which she was placed when she became unable to breathe, had so far strengthened the respiratory organs that physicians found it possible to remove her every two hours from the metal tank in which she lies, and to keep her breathing naturally for ten minutes, though with much effort. It is believed that a serum to act as an antidote against the disease, injected a week ago, is taking effect.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

BISHOP CANNON TO FACE SECOND CHURCH INQUIRY

Personal Conduct Involved in New Charges.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon Jr., who emerged unscathed by the fire of an official church investigation last May in Dallas, must face a second inquiry at the hands of a committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

The complaint against Bishop Cannon filed with Bishop William N. Ainsworth of Birmingham, Ala., chairman of the college of bishops, by four presiding elders makes an investigation mandatory. Last May Cannon's stock market dealings and political activities were investigated at the Methodist conference at Dallas. The bishop was exonerated and reelected chairman of the board of temperance and social service.

Faces Suspension Until 1934.

Should a committee of twelve, which church rules require Bishop Ainsworth to call for the purpose of investigating the new charges, decide Bishop Cannon must stand trial he would be suspended until the 1934 conference when the trial would be held.

The Baltimore Sun said today the new charges comprise complaints against Bishop Cannon's personal conduct, complaints based on his participation in buying and selling stocks for speculative purposes, and complaints based on the bishop's political activities and in the handling of money for political campaign purposes.

The charges against the churchman's morals contain several counts said to be based on allegations published during July in newspapers in New York, Philadelphia, and Washington.

Bishop Cannon was notified some weeks ago by the four churchmen who filed the charges. Advices today from Rio de Janeiro, where the bishop and Mrs. Cannon, his former secretary, have been for some time, said they sailed last Tuesday for New York from the port of Santos.

On Way to New York.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon Jr. of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, sailed with his wife for New York last Tuesday from the port of Santos. His departure apparently had been kept a secret.

Bishop Cannon, when interviewed on Aug. 10, declared his intention of remaining in Brazil until late in October in connection with church organization work.

The bishop came to Brazil on his honeymoon, having married his former secretary, Mrs. Helen McCallum, in London in July.

HUNT WORK FOR LABOR OF BRITAIN HIT BY ARMS CUT

Suggest Colonial Jobs or Russian Trading.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Government compensation to workers affected by the closing of the shipyards and other industries as a result of disarmament, in the event other suggested remedies fail, is outlined in the memorandum of the economic committee appointed by the national executive committee of the Labor party, whose annual report was issued today.

The sub-committee chosen for the sole purpose of studying the effects of disarmament dealt chiefly with scaling down naval construction because "it appeared likely that this would precede military disarmament, and any policy adopted for one could afterwards be adopted by the other."

Affects Many Trades.

The committee found the disturbance to shipbuilding general, and electrical engineering, iron ore, pig iron, steel making, coal, armor plate, gun making, explosive and transport industries indicated.

The remedies outlined were alternative work of a suitable character or specific government action to increase employment in the industries chiefly affected.

In the event neither of these were successful the committee demanded an adequate monetary compensation to the working people displaced.

Would Expand Russian Trade.

The committee found the chief sources of alternative work to be colonial development or expansion of Russian trade.

The national committee's report will be presented at the annual conference of the Labor party next month.

The economic division made an exhaustive study of the Anglo-Russian trade and urged the cabinet to reintroduce trade facilities in order to secure as large a share as possible of the engineering and shipbuilding orders from the soviets.

The committee lauded the refusal of Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson to be "stampeded by the attitude that the government intends to see that all essentials of the agreement are observed" despite the "constant stream of questions bearing upon alleged anti-British propaganda on the part of

POINT RACKETEER INQUIRY TOWARD ACTION BY JURY

Prosecutors Expect New Evidence Today.

Further revelations concerning the beehive operations of racketeers upon labor unions are expected today by Assistant State's Attorneys Charles J. Mueller and Charles Lounsbury, who have been placed in direct charge of the racketeer investigation as ordered by Chief Justice McGoorty of the Criminal court in a special charge to the grand jury.

Little more evidence is required showing large payments by the unions to the racketeers before the prosecutory will be ready to go before the grand jury and ask for indictments, they declared.

Seek Quick Jury Action.

"If we get as much evidence in the next two days as we have in the last two days revealing how George (Red) Barker and William J. (Three Fingered Jack) White ruled the coal hiker's union and got rich on it, we'll soon be ready for grand jury action," said Prosecutor Mueller. "So far it is apparent that Barker carved for himself out of the union more than $25,000 yearly at the expense of men who earn $5.50 daily."

Many more canceled checks taken from the coal hikers' union safe, which was broken open after union officials had refused to open it voluntarily, remain to be examined, and it is upon this additional evidence that sufficient grounds for indictments are hoped for, the prosecutors stated.

Alcock Spurs Police On.

A special message broadcast over the police radio yesterday by orders of Acting Police Commissioner Alcock warned all leaders of squad cars that arrests must be made shortly of the "public enemies" named last Tuesday in vagrancy warrants issued by Judge John H. Lyle. Danny Stanton has been the only one of the twenty-six enemies to be arraigned on the charge and police have reported that they have sought in vain in the usual gangland hangouts for the other twenty-five. Stanton was held by police on another charge when the warrants were issued.

A "vagrancy bureau" is now engaged in checking the records of all known hoodlums so that the drive on vagrants may be made more effective, it was revealed. Evidence collected by the bureau showing that certain gangsters have no apparent means of support will help speed their trial following arrest, it was pointed out.

Policemen Prepare to Ask for $3,000 Minimum Pay

The preparation of a petition to the city council asking for a $3,000 minimum annual salary for Chicago's policemen was started yesterday at a meeting of the Patrolmen's Social, Athletic and Efficiency club in the clubrooms at 68 West Washington street. The maximum salary for patrolmen now is $2,500. President Fred A. Lohn will present the petition some time this week, he said

TESTS FOR INTELLIGENT PEOPLE—A SERIES

When did the big table grow little?

UNTIL after the sixteenth century, tables were large, sprawled-out affairs, originally intended to accommodate haunches of venison, boars' heads, flagons of brown ale, and so on. Then, around the time of Cromwell, tea, coffee and cocoa were introduced almost simultaneously and the vogue for these new beverages led to the creation of smaller and lighter tables. Typical of the best British designs is the Danersk table pictured below.

An interesting mark of pedigree in a fine tripod table of the 18th Century is the tiny "V" cut in the base that breaks the harsh line of the projecting curve. Oldtime designers cared for these small details. In DANERSK collectors' pieces they are not neglected. The legs should be hand-dove-tailed into the pedestal, not doweled. These significant features of the tripod table will be shown you in the DANERSK salesrooms.

Where does the finest mahogany come from?

Cuba and San Domingo produce the choicest mahogany the world has ever known. There are many qualities, but the grains worthy of really distinguished furniture pieces, such as the Danersk table pictured below, come from the smaller trees and those nearest the coast.

Complete Danersk bedroom groups range in price from $380 for interesting English oak to $2,470 for choice traditional designs in mahogany and walnut.

By the Danersk Plan of Monthly Payments it is easy for you to purchase a collection of these authentic pieces. Your initial payment can be as low as $50.

We have recently published a seventy-two-page book on "How to Know Good Furniture." If you will write us specifically about your home, a copy will be sent you. Call and see the furniture itself where you are welcome to inspect at your leisure hundreds of different designs collected over a period of years and based on valued antiques and rare originals in private collections and museums.

WAR LORD TAKES TIENTSIN; SEE PEACE IN CHINA

Rebels in Flight as Army Marches on Peiping.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Sept. 21.—The national state council at Nanking is reported to have completed its reply to the peace proposal of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, young war lord of Manchuria, who has backed up his plea by military intervention in the Tientsin and Peiping districts. Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, president of the Nationalist government, was quoted as welcoming the Manchurian's actions.

Meanwhile reports from the front tell of serious fighting between Gen. Chiang's troops and those of the Christian general. Feng Yu-hsiang in the vicinity of Kaifeng, Chengchow and Loyand in the Honan province, where government successes are claimed.

Intervention Still Mystery.

National bonds have increased in value considerably on the local exchanges due to the prospects of an early peace, but the suddenness of Gen Chang's intervention, plus the silence of the Nationalist government, is responsible for considerable apprehension and the circulation of rumors that the Manchurians are possibly more concerned with carving out new territory than in cooperating with the Nationalist government in behalf of peace.

According to reports from the north, Gen. Yen Hsi-shan's rebel troops evacuated Tientsin and Peiping. The Manchurians entered Tientsin today and are now 40 miles from Peiping. There are also unconfirmed reports that both Gen. Yen and Gen Feng are evacuating the Lunghai railway sector in northern Honan, Gen. Feng withdrawing to western Honan while Gen. Yen's troops are retreating back into Shansi province.

Seek Interview with Yen.

The various Kuomintang elements at Peiping, concerned with the formation of an opposition government in that city, hurriedly departed for Shansi province in order to interview Gen. Yen. It is stated that they possibly intend to remain in Shansi under Gen. Yen's protection, pending the outcome of the new developments.

An official report from Nanking claimed that many of Gen. Feng's subordinate commanders are offering to rejoin the government, while Gen. Shi Hysu-shan, chief Feng subordinate, has already returned to the government banner and is rapidly moving his troops into northern Shantung and southern Chihli provinces.

In reference to Yen Hsi-shan's charge that President Chiang Kai-shek is using poison gas, it was stated that the Nationalist government some time ago established a factory at Nanking where tear gas has been produced in considerable quantities. It has recently been used at the front against the northern rebels.

Troops Flee Manchurian Advance.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEIPING, Sept. 21.—The turning over of the control of north China is occurring in the most peaceable manner possible, almost without confusion. The Shansi troops are withdrawing rapidly, and the Manchurians are advancing steadily, garrisoning the cities as the Shansi forces evacuate.

The Shantung generals have telegraphed that they are supporting Gen. Chang Hsuh-liang's peace movement, and Gen. Feng Yu-hsiang, the Christian general, is expected to suspend warfare immediately.

Northern politicians have not decided whether to establish a government in some interior city or suspend their plans.

Nanking Officials in Charge.

TIENTSIN, China, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Ten thousand Manchurian soldiers this evening were concentrated at the railway station here awaiting further orders and ten thousand more were expected to arrive later in the night. The last of the Shansi garrison troops were evacuating Tientsin this evening. Railway traffic and other conditions at the railway station were heavily congested. The congestion forced an armored train this morning to proceed to Yangtsun, on the Peiping line.

The evacuation by the northern soldiers and its occupation by the Manchurians proceeded peacefully. So did administrative changes. The branch of the Kuomintang party, representing Nanking's point of view, is reopening, and the Nanking officials, ousted by the Shansi troops, are expected shortly to take over the telegraph and telephone systems and other offices.

Notices were posted today stating that the native customs control would revert tomorrow to the Nanking commissioner and his staff. The maritime customs staff of the Nanking government, evicted by Yen Hsi-Shan in June, assembled at the Customs club and prepared to resume duties.

Peiping Awaits War Lord.

TOKIO, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Peiping, the city of many masters during recent years, tonight awaited arrival of a new military overlord. Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang's Manchurians, who peacefully occupied Tientsin early today, are expected to enter the hoary walls of the former capital at dawn tomorrow.

Yen Hsi-shan's Shansi province troops, who have completely evacuated Tientsin and Peiping, were followed by scores of civilians, who participated in the ephemeral northern government and were fleeing to Taiyuan, where they hope to keep the anti-Nanking régime alive until their fortune turns.

Last night Manchurian civilian officials and gendarmes occupied Tientsin public offices and assumed policing duties. The Mukden brigade, 3,000 strong, arrived by train early this morning, with 4,000 more coming a few hours later. Detachments continued the advance, some southward along the Tientsin-Pukow railway in the direction of Techow, and others northwest toward Peiping.

Typical of Chinese History.

Nothing is more typical of the kaleidoscopic nature of Chinese politico warfare than Peiping's changing history. Twenty-seven months ago the Manchurians evacuated Peiping, following to Manchuria their beaten, doomed chieftain, old Chang Tso-lin, whose spectacular career was ended by an unknown assassin's bomb.

Today his son was sending the same troops back to reoccupy Peiping. The Manchurian retreat of 1928 was compelled by the onslaught of Yen Hsi-shan's Shansi troops and Feng Yu-Hsiang's Myrmidons forming a spearhead with Nanking's Nationalist armies. Today Yen and Feng were retreating before the Mukden forces returning as quasi-allies of Nanking.

Astute observers believe Chang is anxious to maintain the balance of power between Nanking on one hand and the Yen and Feng clique on the other, meanwhile giving lip service to Nanking, but actually following in his father's footsteps, seeking to expand his dominions south of the great wall as his father did many times, each time courting defeat.

"PEACE" INVASION

Arrow on map points to Tientsin, taken by Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, Manchurian war lord, and his army after invading China with supposed purpose of ending civil war. Northern rebels flee to Shansi province as the war lord prepares to seize Peiping, which he expects to reach at dawn today. President Chiang Kai-shek is said to welcome the Manchurian's action.

JUGO-SLAVS OF CHICAGO PROTEST FOUR EXECUTIONS

Recent execution of four young Jugo-Slav students by the Italian government at Trieste was termed "a massacre" and "an outrage" last night by Dr. Francis Ralph Preveden, professor at De Paul university and a research assistant at the University of Chicago, addressing a protest meeting at Chicago Sokol hall, 2345 South Kedzie avenue.

Representatives of Jugo-Slav organizations having memberships of more than 200,000 attended the meeting, it was announced. Following Dr. Preveden's address, a resolution was passed which contained an "appeal to public opinion in the United States, in Europe, and in all the cultural world to raise its voice against these and similar acts of the Fascist régime in Italy and to prevent, before it is too late, the provocation of another world's catastrophe."

"A wave of indignation and protest has aroused Europe over this last Fascist outrage, and leading in the denunciation of the massacre is the public opinion of America, Czecho-Slovakia, and Greece," declared Dr. Preveden, who closed with an appeal that American public opinion be aroused over the executions, which took place on Sept. 6.

POLICE RADIO TRAPS YOUTHFUL ROBBERS IN ACT

Two boy robbers, still struggling with their quarry, were captured late last night by a police squad which was summoned to the scene by a police radio message. The captives were Samuel Pezzferro, 14 years old, 1018 South Paulina street, and Bernard Vecchiollo, 17 years old, 903 South Paulina street.

According to police, the boys hid in an alley in Laflin street, just south of Roosevelt road, and pounced on Arthur Spat, 1836 West 13th street, as he passed. Spat resisted until Sergt. David Laughlin and his squad arrived. The sergeant was cruising the district when he received the radio report.

U. S. NAVAL RANK TO BE AT STAKE AT NEXT SESSION

Building Up to Treaty "Parity" Opposed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—America's future position as a naval power among the nations will be at stake in the congressional controversy this winter over the question of how far the United States should go toward building up to the maximum tonnage limits set by the London treaty.

With the pact now virtually assured of approval by Japan, pacifist and peace groups already are mobilizing their forces to combat the enactment of the enabling legislation which would authorize the construction of the 200,000 tons of fighting ships which, together with vessels now building and appropriated for, must be built or at least laid down prior to Dec. 31, 1936, if the United States is to have anything like treaty "parity" with Great Britain and a stronger navy than Japan.

Controversy Is Predicted.

Statements made by "little navy" and "adequate navy" men in congress on the subject of American naval construction under the treaty disclose a distinct line of cleavage which is certain to be translated into a bitter legislative controversy over two issues. One of these issues has to do with the amount of the appropriations to be voted for new construction in the navy during the next fiscal year; the second will deal with the size of the naval construction bill that should be pushed through congress.

It is now certain a bill will be introduced in congress authorizing the construction of at least 200,000 tons of cruisers, aircraft carriers, and submarines. Such a bill will be backed by the "adequate navy" group, led by Chairman Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.] of the house naval affairs committee. It will have the support of a majority of the navy. President Hoover's reaction toward such a bill has not been made known. The National Council for Prevention of War, the nation's leading pacifist lobby organization, with headquarters in Washington, already has questioned, in its current monthly bulletin, the necessity of any new construction legislation prior to the expiration of the pact. Indications are that Chairman Burton L. French [Rep., Idaho] of the naval subcommittee of the house appropriations committee will oppose the measure.

Ratio Depends on Building.

The purpose of the naval construction will be to give the navy authority to build if appropriations are made available the ships needed to give the United States the 5-5 parity ratio with Great Britain and the 10-7 ratio with Japan which supporters of the treaty said would be possible under the pact. Practically the ratios of naval strength between Great Britain, the United States, and Japan will be based on what each nation actually builds.

As matters stand today the United States is inferior in fighting ships to Great Britain and second to Japan in modern cruisers, destroyer and submarine tonnage. Under the treaty the United States has the right, according to the statements made by administration backers of the pact, to tonnage parity with Great Britain and a superiority to Japan approximating the ratio of ten to seven. Failure to replace old ships as they reached the age of obsoletion has now placed the United States in a position where unless new ships are authorized and built the American navy will sink even lower in comparison with Great Britain and may be forced to accept a second place position to Japan in all types of vessels except battleships and aircraft carriers.

U. S. Must Build or Lose.

Figures prepared for the participants in the London naval treaty fight disclosed that should the United States authorize and build no new ships in addition to those now building or appropriated for this country would have but 787,000 tons of modern ships of its treaty maximum allowance of 1,100,000 tons in round numbers. Adoption of the pacifist program, aligned against any new authorization at all before 1936, would leave this country without one modern destroyer, with less than one-third of its submarine maximum of 52,700 tons, slightly more than one-half of its carrier tonnage, and with about two-thirds of its allotted cruiser tonnage in modern ships.

The general board will begin formal hearings Monday looking toward the formulation of its recommendations.

LIQUOR CONTROL BY STATES.

A correspondent asks THE TRIBUNE, in view of its advocacy of the return of liquor control to the states, where there is an example of the good effects of it. The United States was proceeding under state control until national prohibition. The general feeling regarding the question then was somewhat different and what would be the attitude of the states now can hardly be predicted by reference to what their attitude was then. Some were dry. Michigan as a dry state with wet neighbors unquestionably had evasions of its law but it was not in anything like so bad a condition then without federal law as it is now with it. Now Detroit is a booze port for citizens of other states.

Canada has the equivalent of state control. The provinces are not bound by dominion law but by their own. They regulate the matter as they please. Prohibitionists say the conditions are bad. More reasonable observers say they are good. No Canadian dominion has any such problem as is found in the dry American states under federal jurisdiction in prohibition.

Consequences of state control cannot be predicted or achieved by one state for another and should not be. Whatever they will be, the responsibility will be upon the state, as it should be. It is not a concern of Kansas what happens in New York. New York is a better judge of its laws than Kansas will be. Law from Georgia is not properly given Illinois in such respects.

Federal prohibition is a distortion of the American system of federal union. It is wrong in its essence. The eighteenth amendment is a violation of the intent of the union. When the states adopted it in a distracted period they threw away their own rights which would have been reserved by them with saner thinking. It will be difficult to remedy this, but it may not be impossible. It cannot be regarded as impossible if there is to be any intelligent reapproach to the question of liquor control.

It is a matter for state determination. If one state handles it badly it will stand the consequences, as it should. If a critic thinks the states cannot control, the answer is that the federal government not only cannot but should not. Both principle and practice are at fault. One is obnoxious. The other is intolerable.

O, A BASEBALL LOT IS NOT A HAPPY ONE.

Mr. Wrigley's fellow citizens were interested to learn from him, through THE TRIBUNE sports, how it feels to try to give baseball to a city in a large way. Mr. Eckstein and Mr. Insull give opera that way, Mr. Insull's being civic in addition. The universities provide football and generous citizens give museums, aquariums, planetariums, pictures, orchestras, horse racing, air racing and other decorations of life. All of it takes money. Some of it is taken at the gate, much of it comes out of the donor's purse.

Mr. Wrigley's ambition for Chicago is winning baseball. Five thousand citizens will be civic with Mr. Insull and fifty thousand will be civic with Mr. Wrigley, when he seems to be succeeding. Other patrons of the arts and sports can put down a dollar with a fair assurance of getting a dollar's worth. When Mr. Eckstein signs Miss Bori, Miss Rethberg, Mr. Martinelli, Mr. Johnston, etc., for a season he takes some chance with common and other colds, but experience has proved that he can about guarantee what the customers will get. The promoter who put Dempsey and Tunney in the ring at Soldiers' field did not know who would win, but he knew there would be a fight. Mr. Wrigley may go into the market with a hundred thousand dollar check in his hand and buy a player who will break his leg in the first game or slump out of all form in midseason. He can see his whole outfit lose all dependability for one reason or another, or for no apparent reason, and, furthermore, he knows that if he gets a winning combination the chances are that he cannot keep it together for more than three or four years and that it will take ten years at least to get another one.

Mr. Wrigley's public is inclined to make very few compromises with him. He gets the pennant or a cup of grief. A good try has no consolations. Art for art's sake is out. It's worth while to keep out of second division, but the great majority of the customers have no use for anything but first place. They find a curious sort of personal injury in the disappointment a ball team can give them and the relief is in hooting the team and everything connected with it. It will draw fifty thousand when it is winning or has a chance and fifteen when it is not and hasn't. Mr. Wrigley may have moments when he wishes that his ambition for the city was an arboretum. But this citizen is game. He has the money and will have the ball team.

THE FARMERS AND THE BOARD OF TRADE.

The department of agriculture is negotiating with the Board of Trade and other commodity exchanges with a view to modifying some of the restrictions imposed by the federal government upon these marketing agencies. The government appears willing to modify its requirements if the exchanges will make certain alterations in their rules.

The government paid no attention to the complaints of grain traders until the government went into the grain business. Then it discovered that the restrictions which it had imposed upon the exchanges were, indeed, serving to depress prices at the expense of the farmers. The regulations were put into effect largely because the professional friends of the farmer in congress insisted that every grain dealer was the enemy of every farmer. Common sense would have taught the federal government that the grain traders who buy what the farmers have to sell are, by virtue of that fact, the most useful allies the farmers have. It was not until the farm board had sunk $60,000,000 or more in wheat in a declining market that the truth penetrated.

Although weather conditions this year have offered unusual attractions to grain buyers, the turnover on the Board of Trade in the first eight months has been some two billion bushels less than in the same period a year ago, a decline of more than 13 per cent. The federal regulations must be held responsible in no small degree. Buying has been discouraged and prices have reflected the lack of interest. This was as true before the government entered the wheat market as it is today. It took the loss of millions of dollars to convince government officials that the advice of demagogues is worth a good deal less than nothing.

GEN. DAVIS.

The retirement from the command of the 66th infantry brigade and from active service of Brig. Gen. Abel Davis is a severe loss to the National Guard in Illinois and in the nation. Gen Davis has served in the guard from private to brigadier general covering a period of 33 years with experience in two wars, with marked gallantry and distinction in the A. E. F. In our guard affairs he has represented high character, military competence, and experience of actual war conditions, in other words, the qualifications which ought to govern appointment to command or promotion in a military establishment aspiring to public confidence and respect. Unfortunately, politics and pull have influence to ignore them and in the case of Gen. Davis operated to deprive him of the full official recognition of his merits. But this, so far as his own personal satisfaction is concerned, must have been more than compensated by the regard in which all true guardsmen and the civilian public hold him. Gen. Davis has been a brave soldier and an officer of ability and distinction. The guard and the state are too much in his debt to begrudge him retirement but all friends of national defense will regret it.

THE CUP RACES.

While the victory of the defender in the American cup races is gratifying to American pride it is significant that the trial has aroused less general interest than past contests for this historic trophy. This does not indicate a cooling of the temperature of American national feeling nor a falling off of interest in yachting, for, though we are less sea-conscious than the American public of fifty or sixty years ago, we in this inland region, at least, are more given to water sports than the last generation.

We suspect the lack of interest is due partly to our preoccupation with other sports, with flying and motoring, with international contests in golf, tennis and polo. But partly and chiefly we think it is the result of a lack of suspense, a conviction that under the conditions of the contest the chances of losing the cup are small. The challenger is one boat built for the contest. The defender is one of several built for the purpose. The expense is enormous and can only be met by groups of wealthy men, but it provides a drastic test of merit which comes too high for yachtsmen abroad. The contest also in spite of the modification of the rules calls for a special type, of little use after the contest is over, and there is yachting opinion which holds that for this reason the cup contests have done little to improve practicable types of sailing craft.

We may leave such questions to the experts, but the fact remains that if no challenger ever again appears in our waters there will be little disappointment except perhaps among ardent racing yachtsmen. Mr. Vanderbilt appears in the first rank of racing skippers and has made a name for himself in yachting history, though we think he would have added a sparkle to his crown if he had turned back in the third race when accident compelled his gallant rival to give up. No doubt that would not have changed the result and was not required by racing rules or ethics. But a touch of grace would at least have pleased the landsman and perhaps have done something to warm a cooling sentiment toward this competition.

Meanwhile the veteran contender, though disappointed in his purpose, goes back with the applause of America for his pluck and persistence. This may not console him for failure to lift the trophy, but is a consolation prize a good sportsman will value.

HOW NEW YORK PAYS FOR SUBWAYS.

[New York Sun.]

In 1931 every owner of real estate in New York City valued at $10,000 will pay $41.50, or 830 nickels, toward the cost of constructing the new subway system. Under the Delaney method of paying for a part of the subway work by direct taxation, the budget for next year will carry an item of $45,750,000, representing the installments necessary to redeem the four outstanding issues of four year bonds. There are $208,000,000 of these bonds issued.

Interest on the stock and notes issued and to be issued for the work and payable in 1931 is estimated at $16,700,000. The board of transportation fixes its salaries and wages for the year at $8,250,000. The three items combined represent $74,700,000 that is to be collected in the taxes.

This is not all the subway expense carried in the budget. Interest on the bonds issued for the existing rapid transit railroads operated by the Interborough and the B. M. T. is $14,300,000, and the sum necessary to amortize these bonds is $3,100,000, making an additional $17,400,000 borne by the taxpayers in connection with rapid transit. The total is more than 15 per cent of the budget.

EAT FOODS YOU LIKE.

IF your food appeals to you the chances that you can digest it are good. If it repulses you the chances are that it will give you indigestion. If you continually eat foods which tempt, the impulse to good digestion will be gradually lost. If you continually eat foods which are offensive the dislike and the tendency to indigestion grows.

If you stop eating attractive foods when they cease to attract, and, after an interval, start again with them, the stimulus to digestion is as it was in the beginning. If you stop eating unattractive foods and later begin eating them again you will find that your repulsion and consequent tendency to indigestion will start up where it left off and not at the level on which it began. The tendency toward indigestion from distaste is greater than that of good digestion from appealing taste. These conclusions resulted from experiments made by Dr. Boldyreff.

He found that when food appeals to the nose, the palate, and the sight, digestive juices begin to pour out and the alimentary tube to become active. Furthermore, the juices improve in quality as well as in quantity. So far, he merely followed the footsteps of Beaumont, Pavlov, and other experimenters. His discovery consisted in finding that the influence of pleasant association kept up day by day tended to wear out—the appeal began finally to pall and the juices to decline in quality.

On the other hand, if offensive or irritating foods were fed daily the harmful influence seemed to increase. A man might take quinine one day without having his digestion upset, but if he kept it up the time would come when even thinking of quinine would nauseate him. If he stopped it for a month and then resumed it, he would start with being upset and presently would vomit after every dose. On the other hand, if he ate apple pie until he lost his appetite for it, stopped for a month and then resumed eating it, he would relish it as much as he did when he began in the first place.

TUBERCULOSIS IS SUSPECTED.

Mrs. F. W. A. writes: I have adopted three children. Two I raised. One was healthy until she was five years old. She then began to droop, became anemic, developed dropsy, and died. The doctor said that it was due to the fact that her mother, when expectant, ate improperly.

REPLY.

I think it probable that the child contracted heart disease or tuberculosis. It may be possible for the bad effects of the mother's wrong diet to hold off five years, but the chance is against that explanation.

CATARACT ON BOTH EYES.

Mrs. J. M. writes: I have a grandmother, 65 years of age, who has a cataract on both eyes. She is going blind. Is there a medicine that will remove the cataract?

REPLY.

If one can find the cause of a cataract it is sometimes feasible to help somewhat. For instance, cataract due to exposure to glare, heat, and dust is somewhat amenable to better care of the eyes. Cataract due to certain diseases is benefited by attention to the underlying disease.

In the sense I think you mean, treatment would be unsatisfactory.

TWO OR THREE MEALS?

Miss D. N. writes: A friend of mine has been following a no breakfast plan for a number of years. He has his first meal at about 11 a. m. and then eats about 5:30 p. m. Both meals are quite substantial.

We have discussed the matter several times. I claim that three meals a day are better.

REPLY.

With the average person it makes no particular difference. This man probably eats as much at two meals as he would at three. All in all, the custom of three meals a day is about right.

USE OF LUTEIN TABLETS.

J. M. writes:

1. What are lutein tablets?
2. What is their effect and for what are they used?

REPLY.

1. Tablets containing ovarian material.
2. They are used to give relief in hot flashes and also to prevent them.

Which drives all lovers mad.

I draw the tides that ebb and flow

My finger on the old earth's pulse.

CLARA EDMUNDS-HEMINGWAY.

IN HEARING choices sons and daughters of friends have made of colleges for matriculation this fall, we are surprised at the number favoring smaller institutions. In some instances choice is dictated by financial considerations. The majority, however, have made their selections to gain "more college life." This class maintain that state universities and larger schools have become so vast that the individual, unless outstanding, becomes lost in the student body, with less opportunity for extra-curricular activities. It's the "large frog in a small puddle" theory.

Strangely enough, we have much sympathy with this viewpoint. For specialized work there is no question of the greater value of colleges which have facilities for such work. For those attending college for cultural benefit, backed by the hope it will yield vaguely understood advantages, the smaller college with its more intimate contact between faculty and entire student body is well worth consideration. So far as education is concerned, it may be obtained at any college in the whole country if the student himself is seeking that education.

READING BY PROMINENT MEN.

The Book Publishers' Research institute has made a survey of the reading habits of forty-three prominent Americans. It is surprising that the average time devoted to reading by these busy men is two hours per day. Biography is the favorite, apart from subjects of their own profession, with history, economics, politics, poetry, and serious modern novels ranking high. About twenty of those questioned thought biographies read by them had affected in some measure their own lives.

The Cubs, always up with the leaders, suffered interference and tired badly in the stretch drive. The Giants stepped evenly, but never could quite get up. The Pirates gave a good effort. 16 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 22, 1914.

PARIS.—The western wing of the German army has been thrust back seven miles during the last 48 hours as a sequel of the continuous fighting night and day. Both armies, despite almost unbelievable fatigue, show the utmost determination not to yield an inch of ground without a terrible struggle, but the fresher troops at the disposal of the commanders of the allies have gradually forced the Germans to recede.

BERLIN.—An official communication says concerning the battle around Reims: "The strong hilly positions at Craonne have been captured. Advancing on Reims, our troops captured the village of Bethany. We are attacking the strong forts on the line south of Verdun and the Germans have crossed the east border in the direction of Lorraine. A sortie from the northeast of Verdun has been repulsed. French troops, camping north of Toul [near Nancy] have been surprised by our artillery. In the Belgian and eastern battlefields the situation is unchanged."

LONDON.—The indignation which has swept over England, France, and Italy over the destruction of the Reims cathedral by the German bombardment is expressed in the London papers. The suggestion that the shelling of the famous old edifice was accidental is scouted and the German order to "spare the cathedral as much as possible" is scorned.

PARIS.—A dispatch from Nish, Serbia, says: "After several days of battle near Krupini, ten miles from the Bosnian border, in which 250,000 Austrians were engaged, the Austrians suffered a complete defeat and are flying in panic from the banks of the River Drina."

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 22, 1900.

CHICAGO.—Col. Joseph H. Wood, grand marshal of the Grand Army of the Republic parade during the recent national encampment in Chicago, died of angina pectoris at his home, 721 West Adams street. He was 61 years old. He was a nephew of "Fighting Joe" Hooker and made a gallant record during the civil war. At Gettysburg he received the wound that troubled him until his death.

WASHINGTON.—In reply to Germany's note, a copy of which has been sent to all nations, the United States has ordered Gen. Chaffee, the forces under his command, and the American marines at Pekin to withdraw from China, but a guard of infantry, a battery of artillery and a squadron of cavalry will remain at Pekin to protect the American legation. Gen. Chaffee and his forces will go to the Philippines.

HARRISBURG.—At midnight the 4th, 8th, and 12th regiments, the governor's troop and battery C were called out, with Gen. Gobin in command, to assist in maintaining order in the anthracite strike region.

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 22, 1865.

FORT SMITH.—The Indian council adjourned sine die after a permanent treaty of peace was signed with the Choctaws and Chickasaws. The treaty provides that slavery shall be forever abolished among those tribes, that provisions shall be made for the freedmen, that lands shall be ceded for the occupancy of friendly Indians from Kansas, and that rights of way shall be granted to railroads.

FORT LARAMIE.—Reports have been received from Gen. Conner stating that he attacked and defeated a large body of Arapahoes near Big Horn on Aug. 28. He lost a number of men in the battle, including several officers.

NEW YORK.—The steamer Australasian arrived from Queenstown the 10th. Late accounts from Constantinople placed the number of buildings destroyed by the Stamboul fire at 2,800 and the number of people made homeless at 22,000. One estimate is that as high as 12,000 buildings burned.

CHICAGO.—William W. Downing and Miss Beulah Gilbert of Peoria were married at the Adams house on Sept. 21 by the Rev. Dr. Ryder. Abner M. Lewis of Chicago and Miss Hattie Fowles of Chelsea, Mass., were married in the latter city on Sept. 13 by the Rev. Charles Leonard.

PARKING WITHOUT LIGHTS.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—The new order to the police department to pinch every one parking a car all night without a light has a darned good reason back of it or it would not have been given out. Why dig up this antediluvian law and try to enforce it at this late date? The other ordinance about parking all night in the street, with or without lights, is to be disregarded. It seems it is Sunday in the front yard, but not in the back. I'll bet a bottle of hair oil to a pinch of ashes, and give back the ashes if I win, that no motorist, pedestrian, or property owner is back of this illuminating order. It can benefit no one but those who can make money out of it. In these hard times, why make it harder? Automobile batteries when new cannot stand it, and garage owners have found a new way to enforce their racket, it seems. The police department undoubtedly was created to be a benefit to the people and not a nuisance. And, by the way, I do not own an automobile. Probably there are fifty thousand machines parked out at night, and at $5 per fine that makes—more money to waste. Gloria in excelsis!

RAY H. HADFIELD.

ANOTHER

Chicago, Sept. 19.—In these times, when unemployment is at its peak, when many of our citizens who own automobiles need every dollar they earn to support themselves and their families, the enforcement of the "garage owners'" ordinance is a gross mistake. It would be better judgment on Acting Commissioner of Police Alcock's part to concentrate the police force to the better task of ridding Chicago of the undesirables listed by the crime commission. DAVID L. CELLA.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—May I send you a line to express my thorough approval of your enterprise and initiative in arranging the magnificent musical affair at the Chicago Stadium a day or two ago, and incidentally to express approval generally of what THE TRIBUNE is doing in the interest of music at a time when this subject seems to be in danger of being overwhelmed by counterattractions of various kinds?

B. F. AYLESCK.

NIGHT SCHOOL FEES.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—What are the thousands of mentally alert unemployed people to do this winter? I think many of them would take advantage of the courses being offered in the evening schools if the registration fees were not so high. Why must the board of education charge $5 now, when in the days of prosperity the fee was only $2? A great per cent of those who pay this fee never receive the promised refund due to unavoidable circumstances which prevent their attending the required two-thirds time. I have often wondered what the board does with this excess pin money. H. W. H.

THE LEGION AND PROHIBITION.

Maywood, Ill., Sept. 16.—I wish to compliment THE TRIBUNE on the editorial, "Prohibition and the Legion." It's about time that the Legion quit pussyfooting on this question and come out in a firm stand one way or the other. It can hardly be called a political question and, even if it is, the Legion should be interested in an early settlement of this problem when the very welfare and morals of our nation are being threatened by the evils of the present condition.

Every Legion meeting begins with the repeating of the preamble to the Legion constitution, which contains the pledge "to uphold and defend the constitution of the United States," and every Legion convention begins with a regular orgy of—well, let's not mention it, but if every delegate that attended the Aurora convention had voted the way he drank we should now be lined up with our comrades from New York and the D. A. V. by a tremendous majority. Either the preamble or the constitution of the United States is wrong and it is making a hypocrite out of every man who holds a Legion card, even if he don't indulge himself, but simply watches or condones the action of his comradas in violating the 18th amendment. E. W. DUCKETT.

INDIFFERENT MOTORISTS.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—Last Friday evening a friend of mine with his wife and young daughter were on their way to theater and at Sheridan road near Loyola avenue when the green light was on they started across the street. The man's foot caught on the curbstone and the result was a fractured right ankle. At this time, waiting for the turn of the light, there were no less than a dozen men auto drivers sitting in their cars and some of them must have seen the accident, but not one of these drivers left their cars to help this lady and her daughter get this man to the curb so he could sit down until the lady went after their car which was parked about a block away.

It seems to be the truth that after men drive a car for some time their sense of common duty is gone and they become brutal, as was shown very clearly in this instance. Just think of it, a dozen or more brutal auto drivers sitting by and allowing a woman and her daughter to lift a 220 pound man with a fractured ankle. Great stuff, isn't it? J. B. MCCLINTOCK.

POLICEMEN WHO SELL TICKETS.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—In your issue of Sept. 18, 1930, Mr. Joseph Donahoe states that the Lincoln park officer at North avenue and Dearborn street stops every third or fourth car for the purpose of selling tickets. Such a statement is erroneous. Doesn't Mr. Donahoe know that there is a stop sign at this corner which compels every car to stop? Mr. Donahoe also states that for the last four years he has been compelled to donate to this cause. In behalf of our benevolent association I wish to say that no one is compelled to donate one penny, and if Mr. Donahoe has contributed to this cause feeling that it was compulsory we will gladly refund his money upon receipt of tickets he purchased and which are sold to help the widows and orphans of policemen who may die or be killed in the performance of their duty.

FRENCH USE 'HIT AND RUN' ATTACK IN NEW SHAM WAR

Fast Autos and Rifle Fire Chief Weapons.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, France, Sept. 21.—Probably the most authentic picture of a future war yet seen in Europe was unrolled today among the purple hills of the Burgundy wine country near here, where a sham battle commenced between two crack divisions of the French army, after three days of preliminary movements.

These maneuvers, which were wholly conducted until a short time ago, were necessitated by the unsatisfactory results of the Alpine and Lorraine maneuvers. The conservative French general staff has now completely broken tradition.

A New Kind of War.

It is a new kind of war going on here—a war which is as different from the trench fighting of the world war, or even the comparatively open fighting the Americans saw during the Argonne drive, as they were from all preceding wars.

There was no heavy artillery and the cavalry was all on wheels, although horses were generously used for liaison and reconnoitering. Tanks were not used except for massed attacks, while the main rôle fell on light armored automobiles capable of operating in any kind of country and developing a speed of 50 miles per hour on roads.

The infantry was deharrassed of about 85 per cent of the cumbersome equipment in vogue at the end of the world war, and the majority was armed with light automatic rifles. The sky was literally black with the opposing air fleets.

The attacking division, commanded by Gen. Ducant, left its post before dawn to attack the enemy over a front of 10 miles. During the world war the average sector held by a division was a mile and a half.

"Hit and Run" Method.

This, in spreading out the men to four ten times the ground formerly covered, the French general staff has emphasized even the ultra-modern stalwart and reduced the art of war virtually to one factor—the ability to concentrate automatic rifle fire on one spot for a single telling blow and then scattering before the enemy fire can take effect.

Although today was confined to minor skirmishes, army observers are convinced that the new technique has proved its value and are determined henceforth not to stop at half way measures in the reorganization of the army.

THE THEME OF FALL 1930 FASHION AND THE THEME OF THE Autumn EXPOSITION

SEPTEMBER 22 TO 27

Put down your books of romance for a week at least . . . for during the Autumn Exposition reality is more glamorous than any romance (at least so far as clothes are concerned). The Couturiers of Paris, inspired by the centennial of Romanticism, have poured its spirit into all their clothes! Name your favorite period, the Middle Ages . . . the First or Second Empire . . . the Victorian Era . . . and see how delightfully it appears in the fashions of this season. So don't miss a single window, a section of the Sixth Floor, or a crevice of the entire store this Opening Week or you'll miss an important chapter in the Romance of 1930 Fashion.

CLOSE BATTLES FOR SENATE ON FALL CALENDAR

Major Parties to Contest for Control.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—With prohibition, unemployment, the tariff, agricultural depression and other issues creating confusion and uncertainty the outcome of nearly two-thirds of the 34 senatorial contests to be decided at the polls on Nov. 4 appears in doubt.

The last of the primaries were held during the last week. The only nominations remaining to be made are those of both parties in Rhode Island and the Republican party in New Mexico. Even in these cases the nominees have been definitely agreed upon by the leaders in advance of the conventions and the election campaign already is in progress.

The present senate contains 56 Republicans, 39 Democrats, and one farmer-laborite. The Democrats need to gain 10 seats to obtain control. Their leaders talk confidently of gaining half a dozen or more seats and can point to chances for gains of more than the necessary ten. The Republicans, who even at present are powerless whenever as many as nine of the radical Republicans and the farmer-labor member join forces with the Democrats, admit the strong possibility of losses. The Republicans are likely to elect one new member in Iowa and think they have an excellent chance to pick up new senators in Montana and New Mexico and a somewhat remote chance in North Carolina.

Confident in Seven States.

States where Senator Millard E. Tydings [Dem., Md.], chairman of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee, thinks the Democrats are most like to win seats now held by Republicans include Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Delaware, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky and Oklahoma.

Other states where he thinks the Democrats have a fighting chance to make gains are Illinois, New Jersey, Colorado, South Dakota, Minnesota, Kansas, Wyoming, Oregon and Nebraska. These nine added to the seven states where Senator Tydings is more positive about possible gains make a total of 16 states where present Republican senate seats are more or less in jeopardy.

With the Republicans carrying the battle into Iowa, Montana, New Mexico and North Carolina, where there are now Democratic senators, and with the outcome uncertain in Alabama, where two Democrats are running, the total number of senatorial contests which are being actively fought is 21. Thirty-five senators are being elected this year, one of whom has already been chosen in Maine.

Prohibition May Decide.

In at least three of the seven states where Senator Tydings thinks the Democrats are most certain to make gains prohibition may be the deciding factor. The Democrats are actively espousing the wet cause in Massachusetts, Delaware and Ohio. Marcus A. Coolidge, a wet, is the Democratic nominee against former Senator William M. Butler, dry Republican, in Massachusetts. Former Senator Thomas F. Bayard, a wet, is the Democratic senatorial nominee against Senator Daniel O. Hastings, dry Republican, in Delaware. Former Representative Robert J. Bulkley, a wet, is the Democratic nominee against Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch, dry Republican, in Ohio. Senator Tydings seems to think Democratic chances are excellent in Ohio, where unemployment in industrial areas as well as prohibition have created live issues.

The business and agricultural depression and the trend against the administration, Senator Tydings thinks, should turn the tide against the Republicans in Rhode Island, West Virginia, Kentucky and Oklahoma.

In Rhode Island, where convention nominations remain to be made, former Senator Peter G. Gerry, who was defeated two years ago, will be nominated by the Democrats against Senator Jesse H. Metcalf, who will be renominated by the Republicans. Both Gerry and Metcalf are regarded as wet, but neither is emphasizing it.

Neely Hope in West Virginia.

Former Senator M. M. Neely, who, like former Senator Gerry, went down in the Republican landslide of two years ago, is the Democratic hope in West Virginia against James Elwood Jones, who was nominated by the Republicans when Senator Guy Goff refused to be a candidate for reëlection.

Judge M. M. Logan and Ben Williamson are Democratic nominees for the long and short terms, respectively, against Senator John M. Robsion, Republican, in Kentucky. In Oklahoma former Senator Thomas P. Gore is the Democratic nominee against Senator W. B. Pine, Republican.

Democrats at national headquarters are making no definite claims with respect to possible gains in Illinois, New Jersey, Colorado, South Dakota, Minnesota, Kansas, Wyoming, Oregon and Nebraska, but they are receiving optimistic statements from local party leaders in each of these states. They are watching with interest and hope the campaign of former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Democratic nominee, against Ruth Hanna McCormick in Illinois. With respect to New Jersey the disposition of Democratic leaders at national headquarters is to concede the victory of Dwight Morrow, the Republican nominee, but Alexander Simpson, the Democratic nominee, insists he can win.

Hands Off in Nebraska.

The Democrats are optimistic but uncertain about Colorado, where George H. Shaw, Republican, and E. P. Costegan, Democrat, are contenders for the Phipps seat. The Democrats are quite hopeful about South Dakota, where Gov. W. J. Bulow is their nominee against Senator W. H. McMaster, the Republican nominee. Democratic national headquarters is keeping hands off Nebraska, where Senator George W. Norris, redical leader, who supported Alfred E. Smith in 1928, is the Republican nominee against former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Democrat.

It is conceded that the Republicans have the edge in Minnesota, where Senator Thomas D. Schall, Republican, is opposed by Einar Hoidale, Democrat. In Wyoming, where Robert D. Carey, Republican, is opposed by Harry H. Schwartz, Democrat, for the Sullivan seat; in Oregon, where Senator Charles L. McNary, Republican, is opposed by Elton Watkins, Democrat; and in Kansas, where Senators Arthur Capper and Henry Allen, Republicans, are opposed respectively by former Gov. Jonathan M. Davis and George McGill, Democrats. It is the Allen seat that some Democrats think there is a chance to win in Kansas.

Expect Dickinson to Win.

If the Democrats should win the seven seats claimed by Senator Tydings it would mean a net gain of six if Representative L. J. Dickinson, Republican, defeats Senator Daniel Steck Democrat, in Iowa, as even the Democrats admit is likely.

Senator Tydings believes the Democrats will hold Montana where Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Democrat, is opposed by Justice Albert J. Galen and New Mexico, where Senator Sam G. Bratton has been renominated by the Democrats. The Republicans in New Mexico expect to nominate Gov R. C. Dillon and have strong hopes of retiring Senator Bratton just as the Republicans in Montana think they may be able to beat Senator Walsh

Heflin Runs as Independent.

In Alabama the advantage is believed to be with John H. Bankhead, regular Democratic nominee, over Senator J. Thomas Heflin, who was forced to run as an independent after being barred from his party's primary because of his disloyalty to the Smith cause in 1928.

LESSEE OF BREWERY HUNTED AS DRY IS KILLED IN A RAID

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Federal prohibition authorities, aided by county and municipal police, began a widespread search for Vincent S. Liotta, head of the Oneida Manufacturing company, in connection with the murder of Prohibition Agent John G. Finiello in a raid on the Rising Sun brewery here Friday. Liotta is wanted only for questioning.

Liotta is described as the head of the Oneida Manufacturing company which leased the raided plant from the Rising Sun Brewing company, according to Abe J. David, prosecutor of Union county. Liotta is a resident of Elizabeth and has been missing since the raid.

Police, today, seized records in a five room flat across the street from the Rising Sun brewery. The records seized indicate that Liotta was the head of the organization interested in the Rising Sun brewery and its products.

Nicholas Delmore, proprietor of a roadhouse at Berkley Heights, who has been identified by two of the raiding prohibition agents as one of the participants in the surprise attack, still is being sought.

SWISS TOO STIFF ON NEUTRALITY; MAY LOSE LEAGUE

Veto International Planes and Security Loans.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Sept. 21.—Switzerland's formal reservation concerning participation in financial aid for states attacked by others and her reservation over permitting foreign or league aircraft to fly over her territory in time of war today revived the discussion among the delegates of the assembly of the league of nations as to the advisability of transferring the seat of the league elsewhere.

M. George, representing the Swiss government, asserted that Switzerland cannot permit the league to undertake any commitments to endanger the Helvetian federation's neutrality, in accordance with the declaration made in London on Feb. 30, 1920, when the league was organized.

See Neutrality Jeopardized.

The Swiss government believes participation in any international loan to aid a menaced or attacked state might juridically be considered a breach of neutrality and give opportunity for another power to violate the territory.

Despite the informal assurance given by certain neighboring great powers, Switzerland remembers the fate of Belgium, whose neutrality was guaranteed by all the powers concerned in the great war by the treaty of 1839.

Firmly Against Planes.

The Swiss government is even firmer regarding the league's project eventually to establish an aviation force—beginning with a squadron of fast airplanes to transport investigating committees in time of trouble, also mail planes to carry ordinary communications to the various capitals.

The Swiss veto threatens the airplane transportation scheme, which is strongly supported by France, Spain, the little entente, and numerous other states. Even Germany favors adoption of the plan.

Stop League Police Work.

The extreme touchiness of the Swiss over neutrality rights has again aroused the delegates and certain powers who laughed at several campaigns in the last 10 years since the league was established at Geneva are urging that the location of the secretariat be shifted somewhere else. Although the plans for the league building were approved and the cornerstone was laid a year ago, no further work has been done toward its construction.

Brussels, The Hague, Vienna, and Monaco have been mentioned in the past as available, and the latest suggestion is that Holland cede a narrow strip of territory to the league on the south bank of the Scheldt river where it empties into the North sea. This land has been a bone of contention with Belgium since the Paris peace conference of 1919.

GUARD ROCKEFELLER ESTATE; INCENDIARY FIRES MENACE SCHOOL

Tarrytown, N. Y., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Extra details of police and firemen patrolled the streets tonight in an effort to find an incendiary who kindled fires in the Highland Manor Girls school, two residences and a garage early today.

The first fire was discovered at 2:40 a. m. in the home of Vincent Ceccolini, a real estate dealer. The occupants barely escaped. Ten minutes later the school building was found to be ablaze, but no pupils were in the dormitory at the time. At 4 o'clock the porch of a second residence caught fire and twenty minutes afterward the garage was in flames.

PILOT SEVERELY HURT AS PLANE FALLS IN WIND

Encountering heavy winds ten minutes after his take-off yesterday afternoon from the Ravenswood airport on Tuohy avenue 4 miles west of Park Ridge, Albert Weisman, 27 years old, 1517 Park place, Des Plaines, a student pilot, headed back for the hangar.

Slightly more than a mile from the field, his ship, a Heath Parasol monoplane equipped with a four cylinder Henderson motorcycle engine, was buffeted upward by a strong gust of wind. The next instant it plunged in a tailspin to the ground 300 feet below. Weisman, extricated from the wreckage by fellow aviators who flew to the scene in another plane, was taken to the Des Plaines Emergency hospital, where little hope was held for his life.

The accident was witnessed by William Turgeon, manager of the Ravenswood airport, who flew to the rescue with two companions and landed in a farm field alongside Weisman's ship. Weisman was unconscious. At the hospital physicians found he suffered a possible skull fracture, internal injuries, and facial lacerations. According to Manager Turgeon, Weisman purchased his ship, a second hand plane, recently, but had taken a course in flying at the field. He had fifteen hours of instruction and was considered capable of solo flying.

MAYOR RETURNS; SPECIAL COUNCIL SESSION TODAY

Mayor William Hale Thompson returned to Chicago yesterday after a summer vacation spent in Boston and the east and is to preside today at the special meeting of the city council.

The principal business awaiting the special session of the aldermen is their decision as to the amount of bond issues for public improvements that will be placed on the ballot Nov. 4. The requests before the councilmen now total $53,483,480, but the city's bonded indebtedness will allow for only $28,000,000 additional.

While the call for the meeting was broadened to include communications from the mayor, it was not learned whether he would exercise his right and submit appointments to the board of education or suggest action on the telephone franchise. Neither was there any indication that Mayor Thompson would recognize rumors concerning the appointment of a new commissioner of police.

The call for the special session also permits the aldermen to act on extensions of street car lines, and an ordinance for the extensions on Western avenue from 75th to 111th street may be submitted. This line, between 87th and 97th streets, is outside the city limits, in Evergreen Park, which has obtained frontage consents, but the surface lines have not yet applied for a village ordinance.

IT'S AS EASY and natural to enjoy the fragrant mildness of a Camel Cigarette as it is to admire beauty when you see it.

Camels are made, and always have been made, for discriminating smokers — the people whose keen judgment unerringly selects the best. But that doesn't mean you have to be an expert to enjoy Camels! The delicate, mellow fragrance of those choice sun-ripened tobaccos is something that anybody can appreciate. Camels are naturally smooth and mild—never parched nor insipid.

Why is there such a swing to Camels? Because more and more smokers are learning the difference between true mildness and mere flatness. Give yourself the luxury of a cigarette that's always pleasant smoking.

The MURDER at the VICARAGE

BY AGATHA CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS.

Mr. Clement is vicar of a country village in England. His wife, Griselda, is nearly ten years his junior. The vicar's young nephew, Dennis, lives with them.

Mr. Protheroe, a pompous parishioner, who makes life miserable for his daughter, Anne, and his second wife, is expected at the vicarage at 6:15 one evening. At 5:30 the vicar is called to visit a dying parishioner and leaves word for the colonel that he will call on the vicarage grounds, coming out of the house in an agitated state. The day before the artist and Mrs. Protheroe had confessed to him their love for each other. In the study the vicar finds the colonel dead, murdered apparently. No weapon is found. Dr. Haydock is called and he says Protheroe has been dead half an hour and summons the police. A note which the colonel started to write to the vicar is headed 6:20. A clock, overturned when the colonel fell forward, stopped at 6:22, but it was always kept twenty minutes fast.

Lawrence Redding and Mrs. Protheroe both confess to the murder.

Miss Marple, a near neighbor, saw Anne Protheroe go to the vicarage about 6:15 and then to the studio. She had no place to conceal a weapon. Redding came along shortly after and joined her at the studio. They came out about twenty minutes later and walked toward the village.

Lawrence and Anne admit they had confessed the crime, thinking the other had committed it. Lawrence said he had come back to see the vicar, after leaving Anne, and had found his pistol and thought Anne must have taken it.

INSTALLMENT XXXI.

CLEVER IN HER WAY.

As I left the room I was aware of a small army of young men with bright, alert faces and a kind of superficial resemblance to each other. Several of them were already known to me by sight as having haunted the vicarage the last few days. Seeking to escape, I plunged back into the Blue Boar and was lucky enough to run straight into the archaeologist, Dr. Stone. I clutched at him without ceremony.

"Journalists," I said, briefly and expressively. "If you could deliver me from their clutches."

"Why, certainly, Mr. Clement. Come upstairs with me."

He led the way up the narrow staircase and into his sitting room, where Miss Cram was sitting, rattling the keys of a typewriter with a practiced touch. She greeted me with a broad smile of welcome and seized the opportunity to stop work.

"Awful, isn't it?" she said. "Not knowing who did it, I mean. Not but that I'm disappointed in an inquest. Tame, that's what I call it. Nothing what you might call spicy from beginning to end."

"You were there, then, Miss Cram?"

"I was there, all right. Fancy your not seeing me. Didn't you see me? I feel a bit hurt about that. Yes, I do. A gentleman, even if he is a clergyman, ought to have eyes in his head."

"Were you present also?" I asked Dr. Stone, in an effort to escape from this playful badinage. Young women like Miss Cram always make me feel awkward.

"No; I'm afraid I feel very little interest in such things. I am a man very wrapped up in his own hobby."

"It must be a very interesting hobby," I said.

"You know something of it, perhaps?"

I was obliged to confess that I knew next to nothing.

Dr. Stone was not the kind of man whom a confession of ignorance daunts. The result was exactly the same as though I had said that the excavation of barrows was my only relaxation. He surged and eddied into speech. Long barrows, round barrows, stone age, bronze age, paleolithic, neolithic, kietvaens, and cromlechs, it burst forth in a torrent. I had little to do save nod my head and look intelligent—and that last is perhaps overoptimistic. Dr. Stone boomed on. He is a little man. His head is round and bald, his face is round and rosy, and he beams at you through very strong glasses. I have never known a man so enthusiastic on so little encouragement. He went into every argument for and against his own pet theory—which, by the way, I quite failed to grasp!

"Well, I must really be going."

"An opinionated boor," he said, with heat. "Yes, yes, I know he is dead and one should speak no ill of the dead. But death does not alter facts. An opinionated boor describes him exactly. Because he had read a few books he set himself up as an authority—against a man who has made a lifelong study of the subject. My whole life, Mr. Clement, has been given up to this work. My whole life——"

He was spluttering with excitement. Gladys Cram brought him back to earth with a terse sentence.

"You'll miss your train if you don't look out," she observed.

"Oh!" The little man stopped in mid-speech and dragged a watch from his pocket. "Bless my soul. Quarter to? Impossible."

"Once you start talking you never remember the time. What you'd do without me to look after you I really don't know."

"Quite right, my dear, quite right." He patted her affectionately on the shoulder. "This is a wonderful girl, Mr. Clement. Never forgets anything. I consider myself extremely lucky to have found her."

"Oh go on, Dr. Stone," said the lady. "You spoil me, you do."

I could not help feeling that I should be in a material position to add my support to the second school of thought—that which foresees lawful matrimony as the future of Dr. Stone and Miss Cram. I imagined that in her own way Miss Cram was rather a clever young woman.

"You'd better be getting along," said Miss Cram.

"Yes, yes, so I must."

He vanished into the room next door and returned carrying a suit case.

"You are leaving?" I asked, in some surprise.

"Just running up to town for a couple of days," he explained. "My old mother to see tomorrow, some business with my lawyers on Monday. On Tuesday I shall return. By the way, I suppose that Col. Protheroe's death will make no difference to our arrangements. As regards the barrow, I mean. Mrs. Protheroe will have no objection to our continuing the work?"

"I should not think so."

As he spoke, I wondered who actually would be in authority at Old Hall. It was just possible that Protheroe might have left it to Lettice. I felt that it would be interesting to know the contents of Protheroe's will.

"Causes a lot of trouble in a family, a death does," remarked Miss Cram, with a kind of gloomy relish. "You wouldn't believe what a nasty spirit there sometimes is."

"Well, I must really be going." Dr. Stone made ineffectual attempts to control the suit case, a large rug, and an unwieldy umbrella. I came to his rescue. He protested.

"Don't trouble—don't trouble. I can manage perfectly. Doubtless there will be somebody downstairs."

But down below there was no trace of a boots or any one else. I suspect that they were being regaled at the expense of the press. Time was getting on, so we set out together to the station, Dr. Stone carrying the suit case and I holding the rug and umbrella.

Dr. Stone ejaculated remarks in between panting breaths as we hurried along.

"Really too good of you—didn't mean—to trouble you . . . Hope we shan't miss the train—Gladys is a good girl—really a wonderful girl—a very sweet nature—not too happy at home, I'm afraid—absolutely—the heart of a child—heart of a child. I do assure you in spite of—difference in our ages—find a lot in common . . ."

I felt that several well known parallels would have occurred to Miss Marple had she been there.

We now Lawrence Redding's cottage just as we turned off to the station. It stands in an isolated position, with no other house near it. I observed two young men of smart appearance standing on the doorstep, and a couple more looking in at the windows. It was a busy day for the press.

"Nice fellow, young Redding," I remarked, to see what my companion would say.

He was so out of breath by this time that he found it difficult to say anything, but he puffed out a word which I did not at first quite catch.

"Dangerous," he gasped, when I asked him to repeat his remark.

"Dangerous?"

"Most dangerous. Innocent girls—know no better—taken in by a fellow like that—always hanging round women. . . . No good."

From which I deduced that the only young man in the village had not passed unnoticed by the fair Gladys.

"Goodness," ejaculated Dr. Stone. "The train!"

We were close to the station by this time, and we broke into a fast sprint. A down train was standing in the station, and the up London train was just coming in.

At the door of the booking office we collided with a rather exquisite young man, and I recognized Miss Marple's nephew just arriving. He is, I think, a young man who does not like to be collided with. He prides himself on his dress and general air of detachment, and there is no doubt that vulgar contact is detrimental to poise of any kind. He staggered back. I apologized hastily, and we pushed in. Dr. Stone climbed on the train, and I handed up his bag just as the train gave an unwilling jerk and started.

I waved to him and then turned away. Raymond West had departed, but our local chemist, who rejoices in the name of Cherubim, was just setting out for the village. I walked beside him.

Indians, Flyers Join in Dixon Birthday Fete

BY WALTER TROHAN.

Dixon, Ill., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—The past and present met over a span of 100 years as Dixon, county seat of Lee county, opened a four day centennial celebration today.

A caravan of sixty airplanes of all types swooped down on the Municipal airport to participate in the air carnival to christen the field, a gift of Charles R. Walgreen of Chicago. As the planes streaked across the sky a remnant of the tribe of Winnebago Indians, led by Chief Short Wing, wound their way along the Rock river to a camp site near the Lincoln highway.

More than a hundred years ago the chief's forefathers led raids from Wisconsin against the proud Blackhawks in contest for the fertile river valley. Planes hummed overhead as the Indians in tribal feathers danced the war dance. Scarcely 200 yards away stands the pedestal which is to bear the Lincoln statue, the unveiling of which will mark the close of the celebration.

All Dixon was at the airport where a program of races, stunt flying, glider competition and other air contests was presented under the direction of Maj. Reed Landis of Chicago. Jimmy Doolittle and his mystery ship, Anse Perkins, a member of Byrd's antarctic expedition, Betty Lund and scores of flyers thrilled the crowd of 20,000 persons.

The air carnival will continue tomorrow with demonstrations by army and navy flyers and balloonists. The carnival will end with the inauguration of Dixon's first air mail service. A plane will wing from the west to pick up the city's first air mail. The port is to be officially dedicated by Maj. Landis.

Monday evening all Dixon will steep itself in Illinois history and tradition. A five mile parade with 100 floats depicting the history of the city from Indian days to its present position as the lusty key city of northwest Illinois.

Dixon is now a city of 10,000 in a community of 15,000 nestled in the picturesque Rock river valley. It was founded April 11, 1830, by John Dixon, who left his home in New York because he was told that the pioneer country would build up his health. Dixon was a friend of Robert Fulton and was one of those who made the trial trip on the latter's first steamship, the Claremont.

Dixon secured from the government the contract to deliver mail between Peoria and Galena, then famous for its lead mines. He induced a half breed, Joseph Ogee, to establish a ferry at Dixon. Later Dixon took over the ferry and induced others to settle in the fertile country. To hear out the advice of his friends Dixon lived to the age of 92.

It was while Dixon operated his ferry that Abraham Lincoln, the youthful captain in the Blackhawk war, was stationed at Fort Dixon. After he served his enlistment of 30 days Lincoln reenlisted as a private and was mustered in by Robert Anderson, then a captain, who achieved national prominence as the defender of Fort Sumter.

Here too, Lincoln first met Jefferson Davis, fresh from West Point as a lieutenant of engineers. Historic data bears out the meeting of the men who were to gain the helm of the warring states during the civil war.

With them at the fort were Zachary Taylor, another president, and Gen. Winfield Scott of Mexican war fame. Although records are not certain they must have met William S. Hamilton, son of Alexander Hamilton, who came, a civilian, attached to relief troops, and Albert Sidney Johnston, a general in the confederate army.

Not far from the site of the fort stands the original of one of the first log cabins in the community, built by Judge J. B. Charters. Here was born the first white boy in the area, Joseph Shellhammer, who still lives here. Shellhammer, a civil war veteran, 89 years old, will participate in the ceremonies.

Tuesday afternoon former Gov. Frank O. Lowden will dedicate Memorial bridge, which was built to commemorate the city's service in the late war. Frank E. Stevens, authority on the Blackhawk war, will reveal his discovery of a muster roll of Lincoln's company, written in the captain's hand.

The dedication is to be followed by a second parade again with emphasis on history. Patriotic organizations, school children, and Boy Scouts from the Blackhawk district will pass the reviewing stand.

The Blackhawk tradition culminates in the unveiling of a new Lincoln statue, a large bronze by Leonard Crunelle. It will stand on the north bank of the Rock river near the Lincoln highway. The statue is the gift of the state of Illinois.

It is a clear-eyed young man that Crunelle has fashioned. His shirt is open at the throat and unbuttoned. He is wearing a loose coat and his trousers are stuffed into boots well up on his long shins. The right hand grips his belt and the left clasps a sword. There is a hint of the troubled waters ahead and the firmness which brought the forgiveness of millions towards millions in the erect, thoughtful face.

The monument is to be dedicated by Maj. Gen. Milton J. Foreman, Probate Judge Henry Horner of Chicago, and Lorado Taft, famous sculptor, who fashioned the Blackhawk memorial which stands 20 miles away at Oregon, Ill. After the unveiling of the statue a mardi gras carnival closes Dixon's 100th birthday party.

In keeping with the celebration the streets of the city are flung with bunting. Almost every shop window displays relics of the past, many loaned by State Representative George Dixon, great-grandson of the founder.

The birthday is also signalized by a homecoming of prominent sons and daughters. The Rev. William E. Barton, authority on Lincoln, a native of the community, will come as a speaker.

FOUR PAINTINGS THAT EMPRESS OWNED ARE SOLD TO AMERICANS?

PARIS, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Seven famous paintings, acquired by the Russian Empress Catherine II., have been brought here from Leningrad. Four of them—valued at $200,000 each—were sold, probably to American dealers, the Russian daily La Renaissance reports. Confirmation of the sales or price could not be obtained.

La Renaissance says the four sold were "The Annunciation," by Van Eyck, the "Portrait of Lord Philip Wharton," by Van Dyck; Ruben's portrait of his wife, and Rembrandt's painting of his son Titus. Works of Watteau, Terbosch, and Lancret were said to be yet unsold.

The terrific barrage of advance publicity for Miss Swanson's latest probably will give that film box office success. Gloria's fans will flock to see it, but I'm afraid they'll be disappointed, if they're looking for another "Trespasser."

Being a loyal Swanson fan myself, I don't mind seeing her in a weak picture now and then, because Gloria is the kind of girl who can survive a lot of mismanagement in one picture and come back with a success in the next one.

"What a Widow" is a farce comedy of dubious merits. It has its moments of mirth, but why the glamorous Gloria, after carefully building herself up as a dramatic actress should revert to the tricks of her old slapstick and clothes horse days, is something I can't figure.

The picture is not boring, because the star is almost always worth looking at. Gloria plays a young widow with a great big bank roll. Having been married in her teens to her sixty year old guardian, she sets out in search of whoopee just as soon as she casts off her widow's weeds.

To get rid of the repressions that she's been nursing all her days she craves life, love and what have you. She finds what she's looking for in Paris. After sampling the Spanish, French and Russian varieties of the tender passion, she eventually settles down with a nice, quiet, dependable American citizen. The sensible Yankee is played by Owen Moore, who, by the way, is proving to be just as able in the talkies as he was in the silent films.

The action drags a little and at times the slapstick is applied too heavily. Gloria sings on every possible occasion; that's not so good. There's no need for prima donna material in a farce comedy.

Jewish New Year Celebration Starts in Synagogues Tonight

All Jewish synagogues and temples of Chicago will begin the annual feast of Rosh Hashana tonight with special ceremonies. The services will continue tomorrow. The high holidays mark the new year—year 5691—in the Jewish calendar. The new year's day ranks second in importance only to Yom Kippur, according to American rabbis. Yom Kippur begins at sundown Oct. 1. Perhaps the largest services will be held at the new Temple Sholom, Sheridan road and Cornelia streets. The services will be broadcast tomorrow morning from 10 to 12 over Station W-G-N. Dr. Abram Hirshberg, spiritual leader of Temple Sholom will officiate at the new year services for the first time since the $1,750,000 temple has been completed.

Hoover Sends Greeting.

New York, Sept. 21.—(AP)—A message from President Hoover to American Jews on the eve of their celebration of Rosh Hashana [New Year], which begins tomorrow night, was made public today by the Jewish Tribune, a weekly periodical.

"The Jewish race has made numberless contributions to the progress of humanity," President Hoover said, "but none so previous as their contribution to the spiritual life of mankind."

Similar messages were received from Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Lieut. Herbert H. Lehman.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The amphibian airplane in which Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field III. intend to make a tour of Egypt as part of their honeymoon trip was forced down during the night at Sidi Barrani, on the north African coast.

Frank Sheits, chief pilot, informed the Associated Press today that the plane had come down on the sea and was slightly damaged while being beached.

He said the flight would be resumed shortly. Mr. Field and his bride, the former Mrs. Dudley Coats, whom he married on Aug. 18, were reported to be joining the airplane party later in Egypt.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

If you are in search of quick definitions, you can call "Three Little Girls," which provided a completely reassuring opening for the Great Northern's season of operetta last night, a musical "Milestones."

Like that play of nearly twenty years ago, which is having a vogue of revivals, this diversion from Vienna (a New York hit brought here to break the theatrical drought) is a romantic revel in costumes that runs through three generations. The frustrated love story of its 1846 prologue is not readjusted until 1890, when heredity gets in its happy work.

Here you will find the modern lyric stage in perfect taste, completely freed from the jungle of jazz. Here are gayety and charm and pretty sentimentality; here are a luscious score and brilliant singing. "Three Little Girls" is everything that an operetta should be, to my way of thinking; it is a graceful and decorative amusement, debonair to the eye and suave to the ear.

If, finding in it no loud melodrama or low buffoonery, you suspect that it may be old fashioned in its manners, gaze upon its revolving stage and be convinced that it is technically up to date. Here, as in "A Wonderful Night," you will find the ingenious device that causes a musical show to flow onward through a long series of scenes with the pace of motion pictures.

Natalie and Bettina Hall, the winsome singing sisters so easily remembered as prima donnas of the American Opera company, and Charles Hedley tenor, of that disbanded organization of shining young talent, are the leading personalities of this cast. They are extremely happy gifts to operetta, admirable of voice and persuasive in their treatment of character.

Natalie and Bettina are, of course, two of the three little girls who range from picturesque poverty to aristocratic elegance in the various shifts of the story. Evangeline Raleigh makes a piquant and frolicsome third sister as the soubrette of the family.

John Goldsworthy, as a snobbish father who baffles the consummation of true love for years and years; Gregory Ratoff, as another blue blooded conspirator against romance, and Harry Puck, as a bright young commoner who mends shoes for a living, are other effective contributors to the performance. The company is populous and attractive; the stage direction has distinction; and the costuming is rich. But in reviewing the many episodes that carry the piece through its three spirited acts one always comes back to Natalie and Bettina Hall. They are girls who may be honestly raved about.

A ballad called "Love's Happy Dream" and a letter song run through the score insistently. They are choice bits of melody—tunes in the best tradition of Viennese operetta.

Texas Guinan Due Back on Broadway This Week

New York, Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Texas Guinan will be shouting "Hello, sucker," on Broadway this week for the first time in eighteen months, or since she had a run-in with the then Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen.

The celebrated night club wisecracker will open the Argonaut club in West 54th street Tuesday night with a floor show with 20 of her subhostesses and a band. Since she was ruled off Broadway Tex tried Chicago for a while, but her stand there was terminated in gangland fashion with gun play, and this past summer she has had a roadhouse in Lynbrook, L. I.

Blames Clergy for Discords Among Married

Rev. Riegler Demands Mental, Physical Tests.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Gross carelessness in tying nuptial knots was charged against the clergy yesterday in a sermon delivered by the Rev. Gordon A. Riegler in Trinity Congregational church, 6232 Eberhart avenue. He indicated that the reading of a marriage service does not assure successful matrimony, and advocated physical examination and scientifically developed psychological tests for those seeking the services of a pastor.

The pastor accepted blame on behalf of the members of his profession "for the discord and defeat in the lives of many people," due to a careless policy in vogue among ministers. The Rev. Mr. Riegler said marriages are performed, despite almost complete ignorance "concerning the possibilities of marital adjustments and the personalities" of the persons involved.

Dr. Riegler cited the way various sets emphasize denominational rules regarding matrimony — each rule, he said, was good as far as it went—but none was comprehensive enough. He referred to the Episcopal recommendation from the recent Lambeth conference which declares that church should marry no divorced persons.

Another communion — the Roman Catholic church—Dr. Riegler said, insists that children born to the couples married by priests of the church must be pledged to the faih. A third sect, he said, required the publication of banns. The pastor admitted the valeu of each of those requirements, but pointed to "the silence of all communions with respect to the fitness of persons who propose to merge their lives in matrimony."

"The physically unfit should not be permitted to marry," he said, "and if they are permitted to marry they should be rendered incapable of having children," Dr. Riegler said as he called for examinations to include psychological factors.

"Persons who are without mental equipment that will safeguard the economic security of the home should not be married by Christian ministers," he added. "It also is a known fact that certain persons are not psychologically adapted to be companions to each other. As such facts can be scientifically ascertained, ministers should refuse to perform marriage ceremonies for persons who cannot meet such tests."

Dr. Riegler advocated five rules. They, he said, not only would prevent clogged divorced courts, but go far to assure martial success. He pleaded for clergy to refuse the blessing of the churches on marriages until after:

Publication of banns or announcement of intent.

The obtaining of health certificates.

The passing of a standard psychological test which shall indicate mental and emotional qualifications for marriage.

Evidence, produced by the groom, of his ability to provide economic security for a family.

Evidence of genuine love, and not mere convenience.

Pencil Portraits Drawn by E. A. Poe Are Discovered

New York, Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Three small pencil portraits, framed in antique gilt, were sent across the Atlantic to New York recently in search of pedigrees. Their owner believed them to be of such historical value that he was unwilling to entrust them to the mails and asked a friend to take them.

They have now been pronounced artistic discoveries of the first rank—the work of Edgar Allan Poe, whose writings are read around the world, but whose genius as an artist is scarcely known even in his own country.

The three pictures have been in the possession of a family named O'Reilly. They are said to have been the gift of Poe to Henry O'Reilly, a printer.

New Women's Ward Ready at Hines Army Hospital

Nearly 700 guests crowded the Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital yesterday for the formal dedication of the recently opened ward for ex-service women. The exercises took the form of a reception and tea, at which Mrs. Hugh Scott, wife of the manager of the Edward Hines Jr. Center, was official hostess. The ward contains nine rooms furnished by various American Legion posts, and twenty-five beds. A profusion of flowers crowded the ward, which already contains four patients, for the dedication.

Society Woman Changes Name to Ride Hobby

BY THALIA

Mrs. Cyrus McCormick Jr., having proved herself to be one of the rare women who can keep a secret by successfully maintaining an incognito during several months, is planning to stay through the autumn in the Berkshires. There she has been following her dramatic inclinations this summer. Mrs. McCormick is occupying the Henry McBurney villa on Cherry Hill, Stockbridge, which she leased for the summer under the name of "Dorothy Willard," and having completed her role as supervising director and star of "The Lute Song," the Chinese play produced the week of Sept. 7-13 at the Stockbridge playhouse, is doubtless planning to enjoy a rest from her labors.

Mrs. McCormick's request to remain unknown until the close of the season was evidently heeded more assiduously this time than before when she was affiliated with the Stuart Walker players in Cincinnati several years ago. She played the rôle of the princess in "The Lute Song," and her magnificent costumes were greatly admired by those who attended the play.

From the Berkshires also comes news that Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Higginson at the Lodge in Lenox, and have now returned to Charlotte, Vt. Mrs. Higginson was one of the patronesses of the Lenox club tennis tournament ball on Saturday evening, and her daughter, Mrs. H. P. Gould, was on the committee for arrangements.

Mrs. Henry W. Farnum and her son, Henry W. Jr., were in Lenox last week, and Miss Alice Coonley, who is here now to be one of Miss Jane Warner's attendants at her wedding to Edison Dick tomorrow, is secretary of the committee in charge of the annual horse show at Great Barrington, to take place on Friday. Mrs. Coonley has given several cups for prizes.

Mrs. John W. Gray is to give a luncheon at her residence in Glencoe tomorrow for members of the Woman's board of St. Luke's hospital, including chairmen of the various committees for the fashion show to be given on Oct. 31. Plans are to be perfected for the benefit.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Affleck are to give a musical at 4 o'clock next Sunday afternoon at the Arts club. The program is to be given by some of the American Opera company stars, Natalie Hall, Bettina Hall, and Charles Bedley.

Mrs. Charles R. Lindsay III. and Miss Marguerite Foster are the winners of the scenery design contest held by the Junior league for the purpose of selecting the best designs for "The Blue Bird," the league's first children's theater production this year. Sketches for five of the six scenes are Mrs. Lindsay's and Miss Foster's is the other.

The production is to cost approximately $4,000 and is being supported by Junior leagues in other cities, which will use the costumes and sets later in the season. Mrs. Lindsay, Meredith Hanley, Martha Fitts, and Marguerite Foster were winners in the costume competition.

Mrs. C. Morse Ely has returned from the west and is settling in her new apartment at 1301 Astor street.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Bennett of 43 East Burton place and Lake Forest sailed on Friday for six weeks of travel in England and France. Mr. Bennett's son, Ted Bennett, has gone back to his studies at St. Mark's, and the Bennetts will occupy their town residence on their return.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver W. Holmes of the Ambassador East hotel are spending a week in New York City after being in camp in the White mountains for three months. They are staying at the Barclay and will be in Chicago about Oct. 1.

Mrs. S. H. Wheeler of Fairfield, Conn., and her three sisters, Mrs. Treat Campbell, Mrs. M. Skinner, and Miss Tida Rumsey, all of Pasadena, are at Mrs. Wheeler's Lake Geneva house for the month of September. Mrs. Wheeler's daughter, Mrs. W. P. Finney, and her family of Rochester, Minn., have been occupying the Wheeler house during the summer.

A daughter, Emily Jane, was born to the Rev. and Mrs. John Crippen Evans yesterday morning at Grant hospital, 551 Grant place. The Rev. Mr. Evans is associate rector of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church, 1414 North Dearborn parkway.

WEDDINGS

The marriage of Miss Helen Carr, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Hal L. Carr, and Paul Dee Speer, son of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Speer of Evanston, took place on Saturday afternoon in Evanston, the Rev. P. J. Buckley officiating. Mr. Speer is an alumnus of the University of Michigan and Northwestern university law school, and a member of Alpha Delta Phi and Phi Delta Phi fraternities. He and Mrs. Speer are to reside in Evanston after their return from a wedding trip.

ENGAGED TO KENTUCKIAN

MISS HELEN SHIMMIN.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Shimmin announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen, to John Gray Seiler, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Seiler of Louisville, Ky. Miss Shimmin gave a luncheon at the Shimmin apartment at 1320 North State street last week to make the announcement to a group of her friends. She attended Miss Wright's school at Bryn Mawr and Smith college, and is an active member of the Service club and the Junior league. The wedding is to take place early in January. Miss Shimmin has departed for a visit in Louisville, where she is to be a bridesmaid in the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Engelhart to Mr. Seiler's brother, Louis P. Seiler, on Oct. 4. The latter and his bride are to reside in Evanston.

Mother's Life of Sacrifice Brings Nothing but Sorrow

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Whether it was faulty upbringing of her daughter or not does not alter the tragic status of a mother, sick, unable to work, and alone; actually left without a nickel for food.

"I am alone in the world now and ill with diabetes," the mother's story begins. "I had a daughter for whom I worked and lived since she was two, when her father passed on. I spent all my money on her education, which included dancing and music lessons. I dressed her so that none knew the struggle there was to keep up a front for her with her school companions.

"Then, at eighteen, she got a job when I could no longer work. Soon after she met a man and fell in love with him. I had no objections to her getting married, as it is the best thing for a girl to do—but the man started in trying to alienate her affections. He succeeded in getting her to elope with him. He would not come and visit in the house, though I was willing to welcome him. They met away from home.

"I was a sick old lady to him, although I never complained aloud, and he didn't want me around. My rent is overdue, the gas is turned off. I will have to break up my home—but that is not so hard to bear as never hearing from my baby. Not a line to inquire how I might be getting along.

"MRS. C."

Just another portrait to be added to the gallery of mothers who get a bad break. Wrongfully indulgent, though these same mothers may have been giving everything and expecting nothing from their young, a lonely, ill and deserted parent is still one of the saddest pictures on earth. Sad mostly because there seems so little hope of wresting happiness any later date from the object upon whom all the hopes were placed and for whom all the sacrifices were made.

It is easier to criticize an indulgent mother than not to be one to a single object of a union, an only boy or girl. Of course, it is not right nor fair to arrange one's life so that it binds itself completely to one human being and one interest. It is neither fair to the child nor to the mother. But the temptation to spoil the offspring is great and people are what they are. Though mothers may spoil, the punishment that is meted them does seem woefully out of proportion to the selflessness involved in the spoiling.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Quite Natural.

"Dear Miss Blake: My boy friend says he loves me, but goes out with other girls. Please advise.

"LONG CURLS."

BRYAN'S DAUGHTER WANTS WOMAN IN PRESIDENT'S CABINET

Washington, D. C., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Creation of a department of home and child in the President's cabinet to coordinate education and child welfare activities, is proposed in a bill drafted by Representative Ruth Bryan Owen [Dem., Fla.] for introduction at the next session of congress.

The new department, probably to be headed by a woman cabinet member, would, under the bill, "promote and foster education, home and family life, and child welfare." It would be authorized to conduct experiments and surveys in health, hygiene, infancy, and pre-natal care, education and training, neglect, dependency, delinquency, child labor, family housing, and home economics.

Asserting home and child should be on a "parity of dignity" with agriculture, commerce, and national defense Mrs. Owen announced she would introduce the bill at the December session and would press for early legislative action.

She stressed the need for amalgamating scattered governmental agencies dealing with education, the American home, and its children. She pronounced the present the logical time for such a step, since the government is already engaged in far seeing plans for consolidating federal activities.

"Tucked off here and there, in cubbyholes and odd corners," was her description of the present status of federal child care as she found it in studies made as a basis for her bill.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Mrs. Hoover returned this evening to the White House with the President and their party from the short visit at their Rapidan river camp, where their elder son, Herbert Hoover Jr., is recuperating from a slight illness. Their younger son, Allan, returned with them and left tonight for Cambridge, Mass., to resume his business studies at Harvard. He has had a short visit with his parents at the White House and the camp.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Wrightson, the latter formerly Miss Aileen Gorgas, only child of the late Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William C. Gorgas, have as their guest Mrs. John Duncan of New York and Florida, who was Miss Elise Walker, daughter of the late Col. F. W. Walker, U. S. A.

Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, wife of the secretary of the navy, has joined him in their B street home after spending the summer in their home at Minot, Mass.

The secretary of labor and Mrs. James J. Davis and the five little Davises are established again in their Massachusetts avenue home.

Charity Army Starts Yearly Battle Tonight

Fifteen hundred committee and group chairmen of the annual Salvation Army home service appeal are expected at the "kick off" dinner at 6:30 o'clock tonight at the Hotel Sherman.

L. E. Myers, chairman of the board of the organization, will serve as toastmaster, assisted by George F. Nixon, general chairman of the appeal. Rush C. Butler, past president of the Illinois State Bar association, will be the principal speaker.

Quotas for the campaign have been set at $379,491, which is slightly higher than the budget for the previous year, but is necessitated, according to Lester Armour, chairman of the budget committee, by the increased demands due to business and financial depression of the last eight months. The sum named will be applied to the maintenance of all the institutions operated by the Salvation Army for, and among, the city's unfortunates.

Headquarters for the appeal have been established at room 807 of the Steuben club building. From these quarters the activities will be directed by the executive committee, which includes in its personnel Mr. Myers, Mr. Nixon, Mr. Armour and John F. Gilchrist, vice president of the organization board; Lawrence Williams, George W. Dixon, Mrs. Charles King Corsant, president of the women's division; Mrs. William S. Monroe, Mrs. Charles S. Clark, R. King Kauffman, Paul W. Koch, W. A. Greenholt and Frank W. Harvey.

An appeal to Chicago children to put away their extra pennies between now and Oct. 6, and on that date give their savings to the nearest tagger for their aid of thousands of poor and ailing youngsters, dependent on charity, was made last night by Mrs. Charles E. Frankenthal, chairman of publicity of the Chicago Children's Benefit league. The league will hold its twenty-third annual tag day Oct. 6.

"Nothing touches the hearts of children so quickly as the misfortunes of other children," Mrs. Frankenthal said, "and I know that Chicago's boys and girls, who have homes, who are not faced with poverty, will respond gladly to the help of other kiddies not so fortunate as they."

The benefit league represents fifty separate charities of all creeds and denominations, and is indorsed by the Chicago Association of Commerce. The goal this year is $150,000.

Short Locks Are Just as Smart as Long, Say Experts

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

An arresting news item of recent date announces the return of the bob. And, say a lot of girls, "We didn't know it had gone anywhere."

Among the fall style announcements in the leading fashion magazines you find the bob supported as anything but a demoded coiffure.

Whatever the young fry is going to do with theirs, the older girl is not going to sacrifice her tidy outline of scalp for an unruly crop of hair. She may compromise her long skirted frock with a short-long style of hairdressing. Rather she has been trying to compromise that way, but there hasn't been much heart in the process, due to the loss of her youthful headline, the bother of hairpins, and the general self-consciousness about hair that follows the attempt to retire from the bobbed fraternity.

The real truth of the return of the bob, if it ever has been off on a vacation, is that long hair made women who were getting by on a five or ten year discount actually look their age and older. Coupled with the long skirt and the belted waist, there was little use of mamma attempting to hide her grandchild in the bureau drawer. She looked the grandparent and she was made to act it, whether she wanted to or not.

As suggested by one noted authority on women and her fashion whims there isn't any argument to be brought up on short hair versus long any more. Short hair, the authority states, is not a fashion. It is now only a part of modern evolution.

However, this all does not mean that if you have achieved a charming half length hair arrangement that you need scuttle down to the hair dressers and have your now precious possession amputated.

[Hoffman Photo.]

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

They were about two years old, the two little boys, and they were being taken care of by their grandmother, who loved them dearly. We'll call them Tom and Dick, for convenience. One day when I stopped in I asked my old friend how Tom's operation had gone.

"Very well," she said. Then her eyes began to twinkle. "Well, I guess the joke's on me. I'll have to tell you. It's funny.

"I'd just been reading some one of those modern child training articles on little children doing all sorts of things just to get attention. Ridiculous, I thought.

"Then Tommy came back from the hospital and he was in quite a little pain. He'd say, 'Too hurt,' and several times a day I'd take him up on my lap to comfort him and also to rearrange the bandage or put on a new one.

"Finally one day after I had fixed up Tommy I heard Dick whimper softly and say, 'Lip hurt—lip hurt.' I picked him up and looked at his lip. It seemed to be all right. Later in the day I heard the whimper again, 'Lip hurt—lip hurt.' I looked at the lip again—not a thing. When it happened the third time something in my mind clicked. That little rascal was trying to get some of the cuddling and attention which had been going to Tommy. I'm not going to be so scornful of modern ideas after this," she wound up.

As a matter of fact, she's quite modern—only she doesn't realize it.

But what a concrete example that is of the lengths to which children will go to get attention. They must have it—attention. It is a craving of their nature. They'll try to get agreeable, loving attention if they can. If they can't get that kind they'll get the other kind—scolding or punishing attention. As individual human beings, the one thing they can't stand is being ignored.

Of course, none of this is deliberate or conscious. They don't know their motives. This little Dick did not go through any conscious process. He didn't think, "Now, if I get something the matter with me grandma will take me up and talk to me and love me."

FIDAC PUTS WREATHS ON THE TOMB OF WOODROW WILSON

Washington, D. C., Sept. 21.—(AP)—The eleventh congress of Fidac, international world war veterans organization, ended today with the placing of wreaths on the tomb of Woodrow Wilson, wartime President.

Lieut. Col. Fred W. Abbot, president of Fidac, laid one wreath on the tomb in Washington cathedral in the name of the allied veterans, while Princess Cantacuzene of Washington deposited another for the Fidac auxiliary. The simple ceremony was witnessed by practically all the delegates attending the congress.

Tribute to the United States was paid at a luncheon earlier in the day given by Assistant Secretary Jahncke. Maj. Ludygalaskowski, vice president of Fidac for Poland, and Mme. Julia Mazaraka of the Polish auxiliary delegation, expressing the gratitude of their fellow citizens for the aid given Poland by this country during and after the world war.

The veterans left this afternoon on a tour that will take them as far west as Detroit. The itinerary includes stops at Columbus and Indianapolis tomorrow, Culver, Ind.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

What was the most embarrassing moment of your life? If you care to have it published, address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

One of Life's Little Ironies.

We had moved into a new neighborhood and one of my former neighbors was visiting me. My chief topic of conversation was our new location—in fact, I bragged a bit about the nearby park, the smokeless air, the nice stores, etc.

"And," said I, in conclusion, "one thing you don't hear around here is a peddler yelling 'Cabbages, potatoes, onions!' at the top of his voice. It's always quiet!"

My visitor had just succeeded, after much effort, in getting her fussy baby to sleep and we were sitting down to a cup of coffee when the air was rent with a voice more powerful than Caruso's:

"Sweet corn! Sweet corn! Nice yellow sweet corn!"

An instant later there was an answering howl from the bedroom. The baby was awake! My visitor gave me one long, scornful look. It was enough—it spoke volumes. Then she got up to quiet her screaming infant.

Food Talk.

"How do chefs in the hotels and restaurants obtain that delicious and most attractive caramel crust on the top of their baked apples and pears?" asks one of our readers.

Such apples and pears always have about an inch or more of the peeling removed at the top. Both fruits are prepared and baked in the usual way. There is, however, one precaution to take. Do not use so much sugar that the natural fruit flavor is overpowered with sweetness.

Cores may or may not be removed. And here I may add that the core contributes much to the flavor of both baked apples and pears. If the fruits are sound, I see no reason why cores should be removed. There is just one objection to cores, and that is they make the fruit a little more difficult to eat.

Fruit should always be baked in a medium oven. Slow cooking not only means the development of full flavor, but also a gradual expansion and this is essential to prevent the skin bursting. Only enough water should be used to prevent fruit from scorching at the point of contact with the pan. When tender, sprinkle the upper peeled portion of the fruit generously with caramelized sugar and set the pan containing the fruit under the broiling flame in the lower part of the oven. Watch carefully, toasting to the desired caramel stage. Remove from pan and cool before serving. These are delicious served plain or in salads.

ACME SALAD.

¼ cup sugar.
3 tablespoons pulverized caramel.
½ cup water.
1 tablespoon lemon juice.
3 ounces of cream cheese.
½ cup French dressing.

Pare around the top of the pear, leaving about one inch of the top without skin. Place the pared end up in a baking dish. Add water and sprinkle sugar over the top. Place in a medium oven [350 degrees F.] and bake until soft, basting occasionally with the sirup. When soft, sprinkle caramelized sugar over the peeled surface. Place under a broiling flame to toast delicately and to glaze. Cool and chill. Place a pear on a bed of lettuce. Work cream cheese until soft, adding a little cream and pear juice left from baking. Pipe cheese around base of pear. Serve chilled with French dressing. This is a delicious and beautiful salad if handled right.

FARM AND GARDEN

BY PAUL POTTER

GARDENER DEFENDS TREES.

Motorists of Chicagoland should have greater regard for the trees that grace the curbs and parkways along home sections and in parks, in the opinion of H. Benthe, chief landscape gardener of the south parks commission. He is called on many times during the year to estimate damages and to direct repairs to shade and ornamental trees damaged by autos.

"Trees put in place when several years of age are worth perhaps $30 to $50, but after a few years' growth this value has increased to several hundred dollars each," he says. "Many trees can be repaired after being barked by bumpers, fenders, or hub caps, but some are beyond repair, although often we find motorists who consider that trees they hit are of little consequence or some unnecessary impediment."

As chief landscape gardener he has become one of Chicago's authorities on this subject. His work entails laying out new plantings in parks, directing parkway treatments along boulevards and streets, and supervising perpetuation and seasonal care of trees and shrubs. Elms, he finds, are among the best trees for street and park purposes because of their hardihood, especially noted where more rare varieties refuse to fight and endure oil and gas fumes from traffic and smoke and soot from homes, apartments, and factories.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Request for Furniture.

"My husband and I are elderly and with no means of support. We would like to start a small rooming house, but have little furniture. If you can get us a few dressers, rugs, tables, bedding, etc., it would be greatly appreciated. MRS. E. H."

The articles of furniture you are planning to discard would help to provide this elderly couple with a source of income. Dishes, curtains, accessories, or more substantial pieces will be most acceptable.

Stove Greatly Needed.

"Do any of your readers have either a coal or gas cook stove to give away? Mrs. G., who is a widow with five children, has recently moved to a smaller flat. Her stove was furnished in the one from which she moved and at present she is forced to cook on a charcoal bucket. J. S."

Preparing meals for five growing children must be a difficult operation when it is done like this. Can you make Mrs. G.'s task a little lighter by supplying the stove she needs?

Black Velvet and Ermine Are Modish

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Jean Patou announces in black and white that he dotes on black velvet and has an undying passion for white ermine, and all of the other famous Paris dressmakers are uniting in these same desires, for this romantic pair of fabric and fur are combined for formal clothes in most of the fall fashion shows.

The kind of velvet that is to be wedded to white ermine isn't specified, so you may take your choice between panne velvet, pile velvet, velveteen, chiffon velvet, or velvet that is brocaded or stamped. It is the material that makes many of the smartest and most becoming afternoon and evening clothes that Paris has produced this autumn.

The ermine part of this combination appears in trimmings chiefly, or in jackets or pelerines or shawls and muffs. Yes'm, and muffs, for Paris is just mad about them, though she would have none of them last winter. And if you don't like a muff under any circumstances, you trim your slip-on gloves with ermine, which is just as fashionable. Naturally, the hat that tops such costmes is ermine trimmed, if it isn't made of ermine altogether, and trimmed with velvet.

The Heim ensemble shown in our sketch illustrates the ermine and black velvet movement perfectly. This is a transformation ensemble that can be worn in complete harmony for either afternoon or evening. The long coat that is fitted in at the waistline and diagonally closed does nicely for evening or day, with its big shawl collar and angel lower sleeves of ermine.

The princess frock of black velvet is sleeveless and low necked, but there is the diagonal Eton jacket, which is shown in our sketch, that transforms it into afternoon. This jacket has a scarf collar of ermine, long sleeves of velvet, and black suede gloves with bands of ermine knotted around the upper part.

The Hat Mode Has Done It Again!
Its New Achievement Is the Fur Beret!

Fashion has shown its partiality for the beret all along—now it has chosen this style for the creation of a most flattering new fur hat—because the supple lines of the beret adapt themselves so beautifully to the supple texture of the fur. It appears in a number of popular furs—and in a choice of colors, too, to match your new fall ensemble.

Important Among Them
Galy-Lapin Berets, $12.50

The hat illustrated is of Galy-Lapin, and may be had in all the season's most favored colors—black, white, rose beige, parchment, nutria, eggshell, rubytone, cricket green. Other hats may be had in Caracul, $18.50—Galyac, $20—American Broadtail, $20—"Little Galy-Lapin," $8.75.

The Frock That Made "Le Grand Succes"
"Chanel Number 19"—A Perfect Copy—$59.50

What so feminine as fragility—what so fragile as a cobweb—what so characteristic of the return to the "Mode of Manners" as the ravishing combination of fragility and femininity? So Chanel must have mused, as this alluring frock was made.

It's net—airy, frivolous—with stitched lines emanating from the front of the frock in a cobweb pattern. The net flounce at the bottom, full and deep, is gathered up in the back, fastened with a large net bow—and there's the impression of the perennial bustle. In black, white, turquoise, coral, rust. In misses' sizes. $59.50.

Lanvin Copy $85 Chanel 19 Copy $59.50

"The Tracery Of Velvet Petals On Net"—

Lanvin
(A Copy)
$85

Lanvin develops the theme of the simple dignity of the full-blown flower in this copy. For as to silhouette, it's merely a fitted bodice with a full skirt, but as to detail it's artistry.

There's a single row of petals on the bodice. Below its buckled belt there's a myriad of velvet leaves — closely set around the fitted hipline, scattering and becoming widespread as the net skirt flares outward. In black, seafoam green, and ruby red. Women's sizes. 36 to 40.

Fourth Floor, North, State.

A Tweed Ensemble, $115

If you need proof of the importance of ensembles this fall, you need but to see this. For every fashion point in it is a sound one, and they all add up to perfect chic.

Of soft monotone tweed, this ensemble is made slightly formal and very well poised by its trimming of Persian lamb.

The coat, three-quarter length, is fitted, belted, flared ever so slightly. It reveals a blouse of crepe, a simple skirt gently flared.

Choose this ensemble in the four favored fall colors: green, oxford, brown or black. It may be had in misses' sizes only. $115.

Fourth Floor, North, State.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., Sept. 21.—Pat Malone this afternoon kept pitching despite early floundering by his mates, and in the end the palsied Cubs showed enough of their old time talent to negotiate a 4 to 2 victory over the Boston Braves. As a result Pat chalked up No. 19 in his credit ledger and now seems in a fair way to realize his ambition to win 20 ball games this year.

GABBY HARTNETT.

Gabby Hartnett, who tonight was the guest of honor at some sort of anti-climax fastival which was planned before the big flop took place, gave the distressed toastmaster something to talk about by winning the game with his No. 24 homer with Heathcote on base in the ninth inning. The score was tied at 2 all when Gabby executed his life saver for the evening's eulogizers.

No Strain to Hamper Cubs.

The Cubs really should have won easier and sooner than they did, for there was no great strain on their nerves, the Cardinals being idle and the scoreboard showing that Pittsburgh was beating Brooklyn.

As a result of the Cardinal layoff and the Pirate victory, the Cubs went into second place, a game ahead of Brooklyn, and gained a half game on the Cardinals. The Cubs will play Boston again tomorrow and then leave for home to open a series with Cincinnati Thursday.

In today's game the Cubs were losing 2 to 0 at the end of the fifth inning, and all they had to show for their bat swinging was two scattered singles. In the sixth, however, they became ashamed of themselves, a matter they long had neglected. A triple by Blair, a single by English, and a double by Cuyler tied the score. Then, in the ninth Heathcote singled and Hartnett followed with a smack into the center field bleachers.

Braves Score in First.

Spohrer opened the Braves' ninth with a double for the ninth hit off Malone, but two pinch batters and Johnny Neun couldn't send him home.

The Braves stepped on Malone for three hits and a run after two were out in the first inning. Richbourg was given credit for a hit when Malone was too slow getting over to first to take Kelly's throw after George had captured Richbourg's grounder. Berger socked a liner to left center and stopped on first to watch Richbourg race clear home on the hit. Clark singled to left and Berger stopped at second. Bell threw out Chatham.

The third inning was eventful for the Cubs, because it was revealed through Blair that Cantwell could be hit. After Bell and Malone had fanned, Blair, showing great skill and courage, struck the ball squarely for the first Chicago hit and went right on to second when Clark juggled the ball. The inning was over when Maguire threw out English.

Cantwell Drives In Run.

In the fourth inning the Braves made their second run. Spohrer singled with one out and moved to second on Maguire's bunt. Cantwell then registered his second hit off Malone, scoring Spohrer. Neun was hit by a pitched ball, but the runners died when Blair threw out Maranville.

Kelly singled with one out in the fifth to swell the Chicago hit total to two, the same number as had been propelled by the Boston pitcher single handed. George never got beyond first.

In the sixth the Cubs showed some of their old time class, and tied the score. Blair tripled over Clark's head and scored on English's single to center. Cuyler doubled to right, scoring English. Kj went to third on Wilson's sacrifice and held the base while Cantwell was throwing out Heathcote. Hartnett walked, but was forced by Kelly.

Everything was quiet in the seventh and eighth, which gave McCarthy and his boys a chance to scheme out the big ninth inning attack.

IT'S BOBBY VS. 167 OTHERS ON MERION LINKS

Thrills Gallery in His Final Drill.

Just a Champion

ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 21.—(AP)—The champion amateur golfer of the United States is Harrison R. [Jimmy] Johnston of St. Paul, but he was just one of the thousands following Bobby Jones this afternoon and getting buffeted about.

Johnston took no practice, but he had a good workout elbowing his way among spectators, few of whom recognized him and most of whom perhaps might have been surprised to know this unobtrusive individual in shirtsleeves, carrying a putter, was the defending titleholder.

Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Today was dress rehearsal day at the Merion Cricket club for the thirty-fourth National Amateur golf championship tournament which starts tomorrow.

Practically all of the 168 entries were on the championship course tuning up for the event, some playing two rounds, others only one, still others played only several holes, while a few, having decided that a day of rest would be better for them than a day at work, confined their activities to hitting a few practice shots and to putting on the practice green.

Joneses Beat Gunn, Voigt.

One of those who restricted his before the battle workout to one round was Bobby Jones, who, teaming up with R. A. Jones Jr. of Westchester Hills, defeated his former protégé, Watts Gunn, and George J. Voigt of North Hills, 3 to 2, in the match that gave the course marshals a good chance to rehearse their instructions. This was the match that practically all of the spectators elected to follow and the match that rewarded their efforts, since the golf bordered on the spectacular side, with the great Bobby and Voigt supplying most of the thrills. The latter played the steadiest golf of any one in the foursome and had the distinction of turning in the best round of the day, a 68, a stroke less than Jones, but it was Bobby who supplied the thrills.

Gets Birdie on Fifth.

These began when he chipped in from a considerable way off the edge of the green for a birdie 3 on the fifth hole and did not end until he dropped a fifteen foot putt for a birdie 2 on the thirteenth. In between Bobby had three 3's in succession, pitching to almost dead after driving to the edge of the ravine in front of the green on the 350 yard eighth, getting down in two putts for a par 3 on the ninth, and rolling his ball up within easy holing distance after another fine drive to the 335 yard tenth.

Jones will be seeking his fourth straight major golf crown of the year. He already holds the American open and British amateur and open titles.

Among those who felt a double round essential was Cyril J. H. Tolley, former British amateur champion. Dissatisfied with his rounds to date and particularly displeased with his golf this morning when he and his partner, George Hackl of Lakeville, lost to Eddie Driggs and Johnny Ridde Tolley went out this afternoon with Dale Bourne, another British entry, and ironed out some of the kinks in his game.

Gets 70 in Afternoon.

Remembering his fate here in 1924, when he lost in the qualifying round in a playoff, Tolley is anxious to avoid a repetition of that occurrence, and his afternoon round of 70 buoyed him up considerably.

Harrison R. [Jimmy] Johnston of St. Paul, the defending champion, did nothing more than practice on the putting greens. He has had several good rounds here and said that he was completely satisfied with his game.

There were a few changes announced in the pairings today, due to withdrawals. George Dawson of Chicago did not put in an appearance and his place has been taken by Ansolo Carille Jr. of the Havana Country club. Miller B. Stevenson of Washington has been substituted for Edward H. Seaver of Los Angeles. Lawrence Moller of Quincy, Ill., runnerup in the intercollegiate championship, was unable to play and F. C. Stevenson Jr. of Los Angeles has been substituted for him.

Thomas B. Wotten of Atlantic City has taken Rudy Knepper's place. Will Gunn, Watts' brother, has been substituted for Tommy Taller Jr., who is entering Princeton; and W. B. Frankhn Jr. of Philadelphia is playing in place of Luther Schamback of Kirkwood, Md.

Von Elm to Quit Golf After Amateur Tourney

Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—George Von Elm, conqueror of Bobby Jones in the final round of the national amateur championship at the Baltusrol Golf club in 1926, announced today that the amateur tournament this week would be his last. He declared he was not going to turn professional.

LAUGHS AT PAR

TOMMY ARMOUR.

Armour Wins $10,000 Open Golf with 276

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Tommy Armour, Detroit, national professional champion, broke par by an even dozen strokes to triumph over a great brigade of golfers to win the 72 hole $10,000 St. Louis open golf championship today.

Armour dazzled the field with a total of 276 strokes to clinch his victory. Two strokes behind him was Walter Hagen, while Horton Smith of New York, Joe Kirkwood and Al Espinosa of Chicago finished in a tie for third place with par breaking 281 totals.

On only one round of his four 18 hole jaunts over the championship course did Armour fail to break par. That came on his final round, when with shots to spare, he loafed around with a par 72. His other rounds were all in the sixties, 67—68—69. Armour trailed at the end of the first round when Ralph Guldahl, 18 year old Dallas professional, startled the big field with a 66, but he swept into the lead at the end of 36 holes with a 135 total and held his margin to the finish.

All told Armour, who won prize money of $2,500, collected 18 birdies and one eagle and slipped one stroke over par on but eight of the 72 holes. His finish was somewhat dramatic. Coming up to the final tee, he was informed he needed a par four to win. He slapped his tee shot 250 yards, sailed his second to within 10 feet of the pin and sank it for a birdie three.

Chicago's Bears failed in their drive for a last minute victory by a step in the opening professional football game yesterday at Mills stadium against Brooklyn. While the Bears missed scoring by this narrowest of margins, the Brooklyn attack was equally impotent. Ten thousand opening day fans watched the elevens struggle up and down the dusty gridiron to a scoreless tie.

The Chicago drive in the closing minutes deserved success. For a time it seemed the Bears could not be denied, as they ran and passed 75 yards to place the ball four yards from the Brooklyn goal with a first down. But Carl Brumbaugh, late of Florida university, who had replaced Joie Sternaman at quarter back, sent four plays at the center of the Brooklyn line, which massed to meet the plunges and halted the final effort a step from the goal line.

Both Make 15 First Downs.

Brooklyn took the ball, but after one play time was called.

While the Bears' goal line failure climaxed an afternoon of futility, both teams showed a surprising offense for an early season game. Each eleven counted 15 first downs, the Bears penetrating Brooklyn's defense on two other occasions while the Dodgers twice smashed toward victory. Once in the first quarter the Bear forwards broke through to smother the attack and again the fourth quarter Bronko Nagurski recovered a fumble to call a halt.

Coach Ralph Jones of the Bears used 23 players and they demonstrated the value of their three weeks of seasoning. Brooklyn, coached by John Depler, veteran pro star, also was well conditioned. The easterners had an advantage in that yesterday's contest was their second. They came to Chicago from the training camp at Magnetic Springs, O.

Recruits Make Good.

In addition to Bronko Nagurski, who served a spell in the line before returning at full back, the Bears' recruits fulfilled predictions. Joe Lintzenich, St. Louis university full back; Frank Pauly, tackle; Lyle Drury, a Frank Pauly, Lintzenich, and Dick teammate of Lintzenich, and Dick Nesbitt, star of last year's Drake university eleven, gave excellent performances. Nesbitt was forced from the game in the second quarter when he fell as he was tackled and split the muscles on his left shoulder. He will be out of the game for several weeks.

Lintzenich furnished the Bears with some long distance kicking which they have needed for several seasons. One of his efforts traveled more than 70 yards. Red Grange, still wearing No. yards. Red Grange, still wearing No.

Packers Raise Pro Grid Flag, Then Crush Cardinals, 14-0

Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—The Green Bay Packers celebrated the raising of the 1929 National Professional football league pennant by defeating the Chicago Cardinals, 14 to 0, in the opening game of the league season here today before a crowd of 8,000.

The first quarter was scoreless with the Cardinals gaining some ground and holding their own. At the close of the first period, Johnny Blood replaced Engelmann at half back for the Packers, and swept around the Cardinal ends for long gains or broke through the line.

The Cardinals couldn't get their passing attack organized, and every attempt to gain by this means was smothered. Late in the first quarter Molenda intercepted a Cardinal pass. Blood swept right end for 30 yards, placing the ball on the Cardinal 42 yard line. Lewellen got through tackle for 20 yards, and Blood and Molenda drove the ball to the 12 yard line as the quarter ended.

Pass Brings Touchdown.

When the second period started, Dunn picked up two yards for a first down, and Lewellen broke through for a touchdown. Dunn's kick from placement was good and the score was Packers, 7; Cardinals, 0.

At the opening of the third period Arnold Herber, Green Bay quarter back, passed 20 yards to Dilweg, who ran 20 yards for the second touchdown. Molenda kicked the goal from placement.

The Cardinals fought desperately in the final period, but Nevers was smothered when he attempted to launch the Cardinals' passing game. Later in the period he was penalized 15 yards for grounding the ball when tackled in an attempt to pass far back of his line.

Belden, Bogse and McDonnell, Kassell, Kiesling and Slater turned in a good day's work for the Cards, but they were never able to threaten the Packers' goal.

Lewellen's punting gave the Packers an advantage in the first half of the game. Belden, Boyd, and Nevers punted for the Cardinals.

Next Sunday the Packers will meet the Chicago Bears here.

Sharkey Won't Be Himself in Campolo Bout

New York, Sept. 21.—[Special.]—When Jack Sharkey of Boston steps into the ring of the Yankee stadium for his fifteen round bout with Vittorio Compolo on Thursday night he will be about half the fighter he was when he fought Max Schmeling for the world's heavyweight title in the same ring last June.

Last Thursday Sharkey, Jack Conway, one of his managers, and Al Lacey, his trainer, were poisoned by food which they ate in a New York restaurant.

When the trio became ill they were treated by a local physician. The illness of Conway and Lacey was so slight that they recovered within twenty-four hours after the attack.

Illness Affects Appendix.

Sharkey, however, developed dysentery which he could not check until today. Laboratory tests showed that the illness aggravated the inflamed appendix which has troubled Sharkey from time to time during the last year.

Sharkey was warned by his physician to drop training on Friday. This he did. When he returned for another examination Friday night and no improvement could be found in his condition Sharkey was warned by his doctor not to do any more training and to cancel the fight.

But the Lithuanian ex-gob, who is getting a $100,000 guarantee for fighting the clumsy Argentine heavyweight and who honestly believes that he will knock Campolo over with a punch, refused to listen to any such advice.

Sparring Partners Connect.

Even outsiders who saw Sharkey train this afternoon in Stillman's gymnasium voiced the opinion that there was something radically wrong with Jack. He was batted around freely by Ted Sandwina and other sparring partners, who ordinarily could not hit him solidly once in ten rounds.

Interest in the impending battle is by no means feverish and the chances appeared good that the Madison Square Garden corporation would be holding the sack Thursday night, even without any unfavorable publicity. Now that the facts of Sharkey's indisposition and his going against medical advice have come out, the New York state athletic commission may step in and at least force a postponement. In any event, an appendectomy seems in store for the former sailor in the early future.

LIPTON LEAVES NEWPORT; TO SAIL HOME IN A MONTH

Newport, R. I., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Sir Thomas Lipton said farewell to this city this morning and sailed for New York on his yacht Erin, to remain, it is understood, for about a month before returning to England. The Shamrock V., defeated challenger for the America's cup, will take her departure tomorrow morning and go to Bristol, where her rig will be changed and the boat made ready for the trip back across the Atlantic.

WHITE SOX ROUT YANKS, 15-7, IN LAST HOME GAME

Hose Mix 18 Hits with 5 New York Errors.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

As a fitting conclusion of their season's work on their own lot, the White Sox bore down on the Yankees yesterday and wrecked the one time proud baseball machine by a margin of 15 to 7. It can be said for the Yanks, however, that they entered whole heartedly into the carnival spirit which prevailed. They contributed five glaring errors, and as 18 hits bearing a Chicago label were mixed with the blunders, it was a simple matter for the victors to run themselves breathless on the base lines.

Sox Start Scoring Early.

The Sox took up the matter of run getting as soon as two men had been retired in the first inning. Reynolds singled to right off Gibson and Jolley did the same to left. Campbell, a local lad who has been hanging around all summer awaiting a chance of some kind, uncorked a hit on which Reynolds scored. Mulleavy scratched a single past Chapman, sending Jolley home. There was another outbreak in the second. The versatile Caraway tore off a triple to right center and scored on a fielder's choice.

There was only one out in the fourth when the Sox busied themselves in a three run episode. It began with a pass to Watwood. He dashed to third on Reynolds' hit to center. Jolley's infield out let Watwood sneak over the plate. Campbell hoisted an ordinary fly toward short right center and it eluded capture, Reynolds scoring and Campbell going as far as second. He registered a moment later on Mulleavy's two bagger. Another run was scored in the fifth on Tate's triple and Caraway's double. This put the Sox in front by 7 to 0.

Caraway did so well for five innings that only one hit was recorded against him. Then he proved that something had suddenly gone wrong with his arm. He walked Pinch Hitter Ruffing and Combs. Lary and Ruth followed with singles, three scoring.

Comedy Comes in Seventh.

The Yanks reserved the big laughs of the afternoon for the home seventh, in which the Sox clinched the argument by scoring six men. Various things happened in this spasm. The hits were Kerr's triple, a single by Campbell, and a double by Tate. McEvoy, who was trying to pitch at the time, assisted the Sox by walking Watwood and Kamm. The chief assistance, however, came from Lary and Chapman. The former booted a grounder. The latter improved on that by fumbling and throwing wild on the same play. There was some more scoring after this, but nobody paid any attention as to just how it was done.

Cubs Move to Second Place; Rumors Fly

Despite the persistency of the rumors that they are to have a new boss and that all is not running smoothly among themselves, the Cubs stepped out yesterday and moved into second place, one game ahead of the Robins, who were brought down by the Pirates while the Chicagoans were winning at Boston.

Revival of the story that the Chicago club already had reached a decision to toss Joe McCarthy overboard and replace him with Rogers Hornsby failed to shake Owner William Wrigley or President William Veeck from the noncommittal stand they have maintained since the rumors first spread several weeks ago.

"I have declared right along that the matter of a manager for 1931 would be taken up after the close of the season," said President Veeck last night.

"THE TRIBUNE quoted me correctly Saturday morning and there is nothing more for me to say. Joe McCarthy is trying to win ball games, and it is unfair to him to have this subject brought up as long as he is fighting for a high position in the race," declared Owner Wrigley.

In the interview referred to by Wrigley he declared that he didn't know whether McCarthy would or would not be reengaged or whether McCarthy would seek another contract.

McCarthy claims to know nothing about the club's plans. Neither will he reveal whether he will ask for a new contract or resign immediately after the season closes.

Hornsby's only statement in connection with the mystery is that, aside from knowing nothing about it, he resents the efforts being made to picture him as unfriendly to McCarthy or to any of his fellow players.

By their victory yesterday the Cubs shaved a half game from the margin by which the Cardinals are leading the league. The gap between the two contenders is two and one half games, and it still is mathematically possible for the present champions to get into first place before the season closes next Sunday afternoon. The probabilities, however, are slim.

To clinch the flag St. Louis must win four of its six remaining games, two against the Phillies and four with the Pirates. The Cardinals can put the Robins out of it by taking three more. If the Cards capture four games and the Cubs and Robins make a sweep of the five each must play, the final standing would be:

McCarthy Bans Gossip; One Cub High Hats Sox

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., Sept. 21.—Cub ball players have to be careful about their conversational activities these gossipy days and evenings. Manager McCarthy last evening caught one of his pitchers redhanded chatting with an author in the middle of the hotel lobby and gave both a call down. He thought club secrets rather than the weather were being discussed.

McCarthy no sooner had chased the pitcher away from the author than he learned another member of his entourage was at a movie with another author, causing more caustic comment.

Boston newspaper this evening were seeking McCarthy and Hornsby on a new batch of rumors concerning the possibility of Joe's being bounced and being replaced by Rogers. They found Hornsby, who was noncommital, but said that McCarthy was absent from the hotel and could not be located.

Some of the Cubs are sticking to the silk hats even after their ludicrous collapse in the tough going. One player, in discussing the prospects for a city series, today said: "I need the dough as much as anybody, but I don't see why a National league contender should be asked to play against a seventh place club in the American league."

INSCO IS LEADER AMONG WESTERN TWO YEAR OLDS

Siskin Rated Second and Risque Third.

BY FRENCH LANE.

With the Dearborn handicap at Lincoln Fields and the Breeders' Futurity at Lexington out of the way it is a fairly easy task now to rank the western 2 year olds which next season will be asked to carry on against Jamestown, Equipoise, Mate, Ephithet, and the stars from the east.

As 3 year olds they may perform in a different fashion, but from their 2 year old records the westerners should be classified about as follows:

1—Insco. 2—Siskin. 3—Risque. 4—Don Leon. 5—Betty Derr. 6—Baba Kenny. 7—Oswego. 8—Back Log. 9—Doris Jean. 10—Ba'r Hunter.

Insco Rated First.

Insco, which we rate on top as a result of the brilliant victory he scored in the Post and Paddock stakes at Arlington, is owned by Griffith Watkins, an Illinois turfman. Siskin hails from the Nevada stock farm. Risque, the filly which we put in third position, races for Mrs. John Hertz. The others, with the exception of Doris Jean, are all Kentucky youngsters. Doris Jean is the property of Jake Lowenstein of Chicago.

It isn't any certainty that Insco will he able to beat Siskin next year when they are asked to go a distance in such races as the Preakness, Kentucky Derby, American Derby, and Arlington Classic, not to mention the Belmont, Withers, Travers, etc. Siskin all year has performed like a super-route runner, coming from behind always and running easier near the end than he did at the start.

Most of these baby racers are through for the year. The Kentucky Jockey club stakes may engage some of them. Siskin and Don Leon are going after the Pimlico Futurity in Maryland. Risque, Betty Derr, Baba Kenny, and Doris Jean will go into retirement soon, and they can be expected to renew their feud in the different fixtures fashioned for 3 year old fillies, such as the Illinois and Arlington Oaks in Chicago and the American Coaching Club Oaks at Belmont Park early next spring.

$10,000 Race Saturday.

Only one stake race remains on the Lincoln Fields program. It is the $10,000 Marquette handicap at a mile and an eighth, to be run next Saturday. It promises to bring together the two fleet race mares, Lady Broadcast and Pansy Walker, which have been beating their boy friends in recent stake races in Chicago. Pigeon Hole, My Dandy, Victorian, Uluniu, Chicago, and several others also will try for the prize.

The program at Lincoln Fields today, which will mark the beginning of the final week of the season, will be featured by the Thomas handicap. Eskimo, Honey Locust, Karl Eitel, Uluniu, and Pigeon Hole, all eligible to the Marquette handicap, will be in the parade to the post.

Fox Lake, Ill., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Champion outboard race drivers of the middle west were determined here today following two days of races in the central states divisional championship to determine the representatives at the national regatta at Middletown, Conn., next month. One hundred and seventy-one drivers competed.

Horace Tennes, son of M. J. Tennes, Chicago, won the feature event, the Commander Eugene McDonald trophy race for the outboard championship of the central states. Tennes, who is 17 years old, won the famous $10,000 trophy by placing first in today's heat and second yesterday.

The amateur championships were won by the following drivers:

Class A—Hilda Mueller, Bay City, Mich.
Class B—H. C. Chamberlin, Sterling, Ill.
Class C—R. A. Guttmann, Manitowoc, Wis.
Class D—E. P. Lott, Chicago, Ill.
Class E—Wade Woodworth, Evanston, Ill.
Class F—Royal Hanson, Milwaukee, Wis.

Winners in the professional division follow:

Class A—Fay R. Ivey, Detroit, Mich.
Class B—George Cost, Birmingham, Ala.
Class C—George Cost, Birmingham, Ala.
Class D—Richard Neal, Bay City, Mich.
Class E—Ray Pregenzer, Antioch, Ill.
Class F—Ray Pregenzer, Antioch, Ill.

Two world speed records were broken today, bringing the total of new marks set during the two days of racing to six. Earl Boyer, Toledo, O., set the first mark in the A class race. His average speed was 28.38 miles an hour. In the time trials George Middlebrook of Lansing, Mich., set a new mark in the C class for professionals. His time was 44.846 miles an hour.

Rough water kept down the speeds in many of the events this afternoon. Following the meet the McDonald trophy was presented to Tennes by Lyman Bingham, assistant to the president of the A. A. U.

Neal, Marcum Deny Threats by Gamblers

West Frankfort, Ill., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Paul Neal and James Marcum, runaway jockeys, who last week took French leave from Lincoln Fields at Chicago, are leading an easy life at the country home of Vally Neal, Paul's father, near here. The jockeys apparently are not concerned about what the Jockey club officials think about their failure to make their appearance at the track last Wednesday, when they were booked for several mounts.

Neal and Marcum were found at target practice on the Neal farm this morning. Both denied reports that they had quarreled with their employers or that their breach of track rules was due to any dissatisfaction with their contracts.

They also denied that their failure to appear for scheduled mounts had been influenced by gamblers or any one else.

"We just decided to come home," Neal said. "We had been talking about it for several days. Nobody had anything to do with our leaving." And Marcum nodded his assent.

Both boys laughed when advised that they had been suspended for breach of contract.

"How can they suspend us when we have already quit?" the chorused.

They declined to discuss their plans for the future, evading any statement as to whether or not they would return to work in the event that they are reinstated.

A group of neighbor boys was gathered about the jockeys at the Neal farm. The jockeys have been assisting the elder Neal with his farm duities. They intimated that they would remain here for some time.

UMPIRES NAMED TO HANDLE LITTLE WORLD SERIES

Umpires C. E. Johnston and George E. Johnson will represent the American association in the junior world series between Louisville, association champion, and Rochester, International league titleholder, while Fred Westervelt and George Parker will work for the eastern circuit.

In announcing the umpiring staff for the series yesterday President Thomas J. Hickey of the American association also announced that J. M. Jamison will be in charge of the series, representing President M. E. Sexton of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

The series will open at Rochester Wednesday, where four games will be played before the teams go to Louisville to finish the series.

2 TIE FOR LOW GROSS IN BANK GOLF TOURNEY

Two hundred and fifty members of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Banking held their annual golf outing at Cog Hill yesterday. While the men were shooting birdies, the ladies of the party took possession of the club house and played bridge for an imposing array of prizes.

Fully 75 of the players were under 90 gross, which is good golf over No. 1 course at Cog Hill. H. O. Geirsbach of the First National and L. H. Reinking of the First Union Trust and Savings were tied for low gross with 76. In the toss, Geisbach won.

J. T. Murphy won low net for all classes with 90—21—69 and carried home with him a set of matched clubs.

RICHARDS, KINSEY WIN U. S. PRO DOUBLES TITLE

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Vincent Richards of New York and Howard C. Kinsey of San Francisco won the American professional lawn tennis doubles championship today by defeating Karel Kozeluh of Czecho-Slovakia and Roman Najuch of Germany, 6-2, 15-13, 7-5.

As was the case in the singles final yesterday, it was Richards' volleying that turned the tide of victory toward the American pair. Richards, who beat Kozeluh in four sets for the singles title, played brilliantly today and had able assistance from Kinsey.

The long drawn out second set which Richards and Kinsey finally pulled out produced some of the finest tennis of the tournament.

The Ford Truck has rugged strength

THE strength and reliability of the Ford 1½-ton truck are well indicated by the excellent service it is giving in a large number of widely different businesses. Under the varying requirements the Ford truck is called upon to meet, its performance is uniformly good, and marked by a high degree of economy.

Perhaps no other service imposes greater demands on the strength, power, and endurance of a chassis than haulage of materials in dump bodies. In this, as in other fields, the Ford truck has proved its mettle.

In order, therefore, to make available trucks of this type at economical prices, the Ford Motor Company has added a series of five dump bodies to the present standard line.

These include light and heavy hydraulic, and gravity and hand-hoist dump bodies, and a body with mechanical power-hoist. This provides a wide range of selection, as to price and hoisting method. With the Ford chassis, these bodies form units of high value, embodying the reliability, economy, long life, and strength which characterize Ford products.

In addition, there is a wide variety of body-types available on both the 131½-inch and 157-inch wheelbase chassis, including the standard stake, platform, and panel bodies. Both open and closed cabs can be supplied, and dual rear wheels are available at small additional cost.

GIANTS, REDS SPLIT.

New York, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The Giants divided their final double-header with the Cincinnati Reds today, winning the first game, 6 to 4, and losing the second, 7 to 6, when darkness halted it after eight innings.

Carl Hubbell was hit hard in the opener, but managed to last the full distance, as Bill Terry drove in three runs for the Giants, and Frank Hogan got home two. Wally Roettger's homer accounted for the other tally.

Si Johnson pitched six good innings for the Reds in the second game, but blew up in the seventh and gave New York two runs. Red Lucas stopped them a run short of a tie. Scores:

Brooklyn Pro Eleven, Bears Play 0-0 Tie

77, appeared to better advantage than since 1925, his first year with the pros. Two of his dashes around end, one of them for 20 yards, were factors in the last minute drive.

Four successive first downs on running plays and another when Umpire Olson ruled interference by Sternaman on a forward pass sent Brooklyn to the Bears' 13 yard line in the first quarter. The attack halted before the rushing Bear forwards.

Lintzenich's Toe Starts Rally.

In the next period Lintzenich's kicking started the Bears on a drive downfield with Nesbitt, and Senn, who replaced him after his injury, carrying the ball. A pass from Sternaman to Garland Grange was downed on Brooklyn's ten yard line. Three plays failed, then Joie missed a drop kick for what would have been the winning points.

The Bears completely outplayed Brooklyn in the third quarter. Passes from Sternaman to Holmer and Fleckenstein advanced the ball to Brooklyn's 30 yard line as the period ended. Another pass, Sternaman to Waiquist, continued progress, but a minute later a third down pass by Joie went astray over the goal line and Brooklyn took the ball.

Nagurski Recovers Fumble.

Stramiello, Brooklyn's left end, received a forward pass and ran to the Bears' 20 yard line in the Dodgers' counter drive. Another pass to Plank bounced from his hands as he was tackled and Nagurski retrieved the ball. Then came the Bears' final effort, which was halted at Brooklyn's goal line.

Game Birds Make Way to Southland Only After Dark

BY BOB BECKER.

Night brings some quick changes to the marshlands at this time of the year. A sportsman may visit the lowlands one day and see few of the game birds that he wants to find. The next morning a marsh or a pond may be alive with jacksnipe, rails, and mudhens.

Night has brought them and night takes them away because many of our migrants on the game bird list move southward on their "hops" only after darkness has come. They shun flights by day. Thus there is the charm of the unexpected about the appearance and the departure of some of our fall feathered visitors.

They slip into a territory on silent wings and just as quickly steal away after darkness. The mudhen, soon to hear a noisy bombardment on lakes and sloughs in the middle west is one of our best known night flyers. This bird plays a safety first game. Not bold, daring eross country flights for the mudhen.

It prefers to work its way southward by the light of the stars or moon rather than under the bright rays of the sun. We have seen mudhens migrating by night on several occasions. The time was October. A clear night with a full moon gave us the opportunity to see the night flyers. By turning a small telescope on the rising moon we could see the mudhens flying between us and the glowing yellow body in the sky.

It's easy to tell the difference between a mudhen and a duck when you look at them as silhouettes because the mudhen's flight characteristics are quite different from powerful wing beats of a true member of the waterfoul family.

Jacksnipe and rails also are night flyers. However, not all of our waterloving birds sneak southward after dark. On the contrary one of our most spectacular day migrants is a game bird in the waterfoul group. This is the Canada goose, who boldly takes to the air by day and while flying noisily talks to the whole countryside.

Practice Game Shows Faults of N. U. Squad

Two more weeks of practice before the opening game with Tulane face the Northwestern football team when it resumes work today.

Judging from reports arriving in the Purple camp, Tulane's Green wave is intent upon submerging the Wildcats in the same fashion as in 1925 when the southerners upset the Evanston eleven, 13 to 6. Tulane las year won the Southern conference championship.

Results of the first week of practice as revealed in Saturday's game with the freshmen indicate that the Wildcats must brush up on their blocking and tackling and overcome a tendency to fumble. These fundamentals will be stressed throughout the remaining practices.

Regulars Not Sure of Places.

Picking an eleven to face Tulane in the opener is going to be a task. Competition for positions is especially keen at full back and at center. The work of Rentner and Rusell, two sophomore full backs, appears to be about on a par. Keeping Tiny Engebritsen, reserve tackle, off the first team is going to be a job. This 200 pounder is coming along rapidly and is going to give Riley and Marvil, the regulars, plenty of argument. Bob Gonya, who played at end last year, is working at tackle and also is likely to see action there this fall.

Harry Kent, who won his letter two years ago at tackle and was unable to play last year because of work in the dental school, appears to have succeeded to a regular guard position along with Red Woodworth. They, too, are finding plenty of competition from Jimmie Evans, a reserve last year, and George Dilley, a sophomore. The latter are former Chicago prep stars.

Several sophomore ends are giving Oliphant and Baker a fight for their jobs. Harold Nunn and Cliff Fogarty, former Evanston stars, and Dick Fencl of Cicero played creditable ball Saturday, as did Ralph Eylar, a second year man.

MICHIGAN STRONG ON PASSES.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Michigan's football squad will move into its second and final week of preparation for the 1930 season after having topped off six days of ground work with hard scrimmage on Saturday. The squad as a whole is working harder than any crew of the last several years and is much farther advanced than was last year's squad at a corresponding time.

Indications that it will be possible to work out a diversified attack, stressing both lateral passing in the running offensive and forward passing, are seen from the first week's drill. Practice during this period showed a capable lot of half backs, including, besides Capt. Harrison Simrall, Hudson, Eastman, De Baker, Heston, Newman, Wheeler, Tessmer, Stoll, Wills, and Yost. Several of these have lots of speed and, if lateral passes start clicking, ability to do a lot of scoring.

The week also brought out Eastman and Newman as forward passers, both of them better than any heavers Michigan has had in the last two years. Daniels and Hudson also can serve in this capacity in a pinch.

MANDELL OPENS DRILL TODAY FOR HERMAN BATTLE

O'Dowd Meets Ross Friday in Semi-Windup.

Sammy Mandell begins his preparation for his eight round fight Friday night at the Coliseum with Tommy Herman at the Arcade gymnasium this afternoon. The bout will be the second for the former lightweight champion since he commenced his campaign in the 147 pound division.

Herman is expected to test Mandell's ability, since he has scored recent victories over Ted Goodrich and Patsy Pollock. Sammy, always a favorite in Chicago, is expected to appear before a crowded house Friday night, for many will accept the opportunity to see just what chance he has in his comeback.

Tuffy O'Dowd and Ted Ross of South Chicago, who meet in the eight round semi-windup, should put up a slugging battle. Harry Fierro, Chicago bantamweight, and Georgie Nate, South Bend, Ind., also are scheduled for eight rounds. Fierro hopes to meet Al Brown later in a title match.

Paul Leberto and Sammy Levine, members of Chicago's 1930 Golden Gloves team, will box six rounds in a supporting bout. Another six rounder brings together Nick Broglio, Herrin, Ill., and Prince Saunders of Chicago. The opening four round bout is between Herbie Derex, Central A. A. U. champion, and Joey Bozak of Blue Island, Ill.

Al Miller, who handles the business affairs of King Levinsky, has decided to sign with the Chicago Stadium for three fights. After the King knocked out Leo Lomski practically every promoter in the country deluged Miller with offers.

The contracts with the Stadium will be signed today, according to Miller. Levinsky is guaranteed a minimum price for each of the three fights and will receive 25 per cent of the net receipts. All will be held within three months. The first bout is planned for Oct. 24. The Stadium has guaranteed the third bout will be against Tommy Loughran, Jimmy Slattery, Mickey Walker, Tuffy Griffith, or Maxie Rosenbloom.

He was found by Glenn Darr, a farmer, who heard the crash. The accident occurred at a dangerous curve on state road 29, just north of Logansport. McDowell served as a lieutenant overseas in the world war. He was unmarried.

Child of 3 Injured.

SOUP COMPANY FOUNDER DIES OF HEART DISEASE

Dorrance Began Work at $7.50 Week.

Camden, N. J., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Dr. John Thompson Dorrance, 67, president and founder of the Campbell Soup company and described as the originator of condensed canned soup, died of a heart ailment today at his home, Pomona farm, Cinnaminson, N. J.

The life of Dr. Dorrance was the traditional story of American success. From a $7.50 a week employé in his uncle's fruit and preserve factory he rose to the head of a world-wide business organization. He was the sole owner of the Campbell company.

Won Göttingen Degree.

Dr. Dorrance was born in Bristol, Pa., and was a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He won his Ph. D. at the University of Göttingen in 1897.

While in Germany, his associates said, he conceived the idea of making condensed canned soup available in America. He returned to this country, joined the Campbell Fruit and Preserve company, his uncle's firm, and in 1899 put out the first canned soup. From that time the company grew rapidly, in 1915 becoming the Campbell Soup company.

Science Academy Director.

Dr. Dorrance held directorates in several companies and he was a member of the American Chemical society and the Academy of Natural Sciences.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Ethel Mallinkrodt Dorrance, formerly of Baltimore, whom he married in 1906; five daughters, one son, two brothers, and two sisters. One of the sisters is Mrs. Ray Dudley of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at Christ church, Riverton, N. J., Wednesday.

Negro Kills Texan; Ends Own Life as Mob Forms

Waco, Tex., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Will E. Lowe, 40 year old farmer, was shot and killed at Watt, twenty miles from here, early today by his Negro tenant, Sim Knight, 45. Shortly afterward Knight, who was on his way to give himself up to officers, shot and killed himself to escape capture by a rapidly forming mob. An argument over division of proceeds from the sale of a bale of cotton and payment of debts due Lowe was said to have been the cause of the shooting.

G. O. P. IN NEW YORK TOLD ADMINISTRATION IS FOR MODIFICATION

New York, Sept. 21.—[Special.]—With the Republican state convention only four days away, the party situation was complicated further today by receipt by some of the party chieftains of what purported to be word from Washington that the Hoover administration would prefer to have "modification" made the basis of the prohibition plank in the state party platform instead of "repeal."

Word of what was said to be President Hoover's desire was brought here by one of the so-called Hoover group of local Republicans, and the wets announced immediately they would require direct confirmation from the President before admitting it should have any effect on the convention's action.

BISHOP LEONARD DIES AT 82; ILL MORE THAN YEAR

Gambier, O., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Bishop William A. Leonard of the Episcopal church died at his home here tonight. He was 82 years old.

Bishop Leonard had been ill for more than a year. Death was caused by infirmities of age.

Hope for his recovery was abandoned Friday night when he suffered a sinking spell, although he regained consciousness several times before he died.

Bishop Leonard retired last spring. Previously he had presided over the Ohio diocese for more than forty years.

U. S. NAVY FLYER AND STUDENT ARE KILLED IN CRASH

Fresno, Cal., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Joel Earl Crane, 30, of Madera, a student flyer, and Norman T. Price, 21, navy flyer of the U. S. S. Lexington, were killed today in the crash of their plane near Madera. Price's home was at Hollis, Kas.

1 Killed, 1 Injured.

New York, Sept. 21.—[Special.]—One student flyer was killed and a woman severely injured in two airplane accidents today near New York.

James H. G. Mills Jr., 37, of Englewood, N. J., crashed to his death at Roseland, N. J., on the Bethany camp ground.

Mills had taken off in his Moth biplane from the Curtiss airport at Caldwell and climbed to 1,000 feet, when the machine pitched downward and plunged into the ground.

The injured woman pilot was Mrs. Margaret Gilmartin, 40, a nurse. She was severely hurt making a forced landing.

Mail Pilot Crashes.

Warren, O., Sept. 21.—(AP)—A. M. Banks, 29, of Lakewood, O., air mail pilot flying between Cleveland and New York, miraculously escaped death today when his plane crashed near Warren. The plane and several sacks of mail were burned. Banks climbed out of the burning plane just in time to save his life. He suffered burns on the legs.

CONFIRM RUSSIA HIRED "CAPTIVE" DETROIT WORKERS

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 21.—[Special.]—Reports from Riga, Latvia, that 450 Americans, principally automobile workers from Detroit, are prisoners of the soviet government in the Stalingrad tractor plant at Tractorstroye, are without local confirmation. It is true, however, that last spring an agent was sent from Russian to recruit workers for the plant.

Amtorg, the soviet trade organization, opened an employment agency. It was known as the office of the Stalingrad tractor plant. As soon as the workers were secured the Detroit employment agency was closed and the soviet agent returned to Russia.

Efforts to find relatives of Herbert Lewis, electrician, who is reported to have been expelled from Russia and who told the story of imprisoned Americans, have been futile.

WHEAT TRADE IS INDISPOSED TO BUYING SIDE

Sees Soviet Selling as Minor Factor.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Confirmation of reports that Russia has sold wheat short in Chicago is not regarded by the trade as likely to be a market factor of consequence, although during the period when the selling was under way it undoubtedly had a depressing effect. There are a great many operators who are bullish at heart and had speculative interest been of normal volume the selling would probably have been absorbed quickly.

At the present time there is no disposition on the part of the world's wheat trade to take the buying side of the market, except for a quick turn. Uncertainty as to what might develop both in North America and abroad is a dominating influence, and one that cannot be readily overcome by statistical compilations, regardless of how bullish he latter might be.

The present price of wheat is the lowest since 1906 at this season of the year in the United States and in a number of years in Canada, yet the market is expected to go still lower as foreign buyers do not seem to be interested to any great extent.

Await Foreign Demand.

It is the general belief of the wheat trade that should Europe enter the market on a big scale and take cash grain on the scale anticipated that the price would cease declining. A letup in the pressure of Canadian wheat is expected to occur late in October, which would also have some effect, but it is felt that it will be some months before the full effect of the heavy feeding of wheat to live stock is noticeable, and in the meantime the market is generally expected to drift somewhat lower.

Weather conditions in the southern hemisphere promise to be the main bullish influence in the wheat market in the immediate future, and there appears to be some foundation for the fear of drought in Argentina, as private cables claim that the rainfall in the northern and western sections of that country since June has been only 41 per cent of normal, and in the

Bond Market Continues Its March Higher

New York, Sept. 21—(AP)—The price movement in the bond market last week was a repetition of recent similar periods. Highest grade domestic issues, particularly railroad obligations, formed the vanguard of the market as institutional demand twice pushed prices to new peaks for the year as reflected in the composite average for thirty bonds.

No obstacles appeared to the continued progress of bonds and the gap between current prices and those existing when the peak of the 1928 buying movement was reached, was narrowed. The money market remained very easy and the volume of new offerings totaled $80,000,000, a drop of $54,000,000 from the previous week.

Attain New Highs.

The daily story of the bond price movement was told in a new list of domestic issues that attained new highs for the year. The week was not without its reverses, however, weakness of stocks bringing a sympathetic depression in convertible bonds and those with warrants, though recessions brought out no great volume of offerings.

While a better tone as a whole characterized the movement of South American bonds, uneasiness developed in speculative circles over the outlook for German obligations, a bearish interpretation being placed on the results of the German elections. The week began and ended with German issues under liquidation, the sharpest breaks occurring on Friday, when the European list was unsettled. German 5½s, the international issue which was offered in this and other world financial centers last spring at 90, reached 81¾ on the reaction, and German 7s and a number of other municipal and industrial issues were sharply depressed. The 7s, so-called Dawes issue, hit a new year's low early in the week.

Report Some Improvement.

There was no sign that the inquiry for domestic corporation issues was spreading further to obligations of lesser grade, which is interpreted as meaning that individual investors have given little consideration thus far to mixed income securities, although bond men do report some improvement in recent weeks.

With call money holding around 2 per cent and other rates on a comparable basis savings banks and insurance companies find the bond yields attractive. For savings banks whose field for investment is much restricted bonds are the principal means of putting idle funds to work. Throughout most of the year savings banks deposits have been mounting and part of them have in turn flowed into the bond market.

FIND UPTREND IN HOME USE OF ELECTRICITY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 21.—The trend in home use of electricity for power and light was definitely upward for the country as a whole in July this year, according to an analysis made by Stone & Webster & Blodget, Inc., showing electric sales for domestic uses in July 18.3 per cent above sales in July, 1929, while domestic sales in the first half of 1930 were 13.7 per cent above the 1929 period. The improvement in July even exceeds that of a year ago, when July domestic sales were 14.3 per cent above July, 1928, totals.

These figures are evidence that residential sales of current have acted as a stabilizer of the power and light industry, according to the bankers. During a depression period, domestic sales of electricity help to maintain revenues and earnings which otherwise would register declines similar to those in railroads, manufacturing concerns, and other industries.

The increasing domestic sales, the bankers feel, are largely due to the "inducement rates" initiated by a growing number of companies. These rates permit consumers to effect substantial economies by making a larger use of current for various purposes and have attracted additional consumers in periods of depression because of the economies in household expenses, possible by changing to electricity from other fuels or power.

Ambitious Soviet Program of Farming Is Discussed

BY SCRUTATOR.

In view of the charges made that Russia is striving to manipulate American wheat markets to the detriment of this country's growers, it may be of interest to consider what the Russian Soviet government is doing with its own controlled agricultural industry.

The United States department of commerce in recent weeks has been issuing notes compiled from official Russian publications on the progress of the five year industrialization plan. It may be significant that most of the Russian observations on their government's activities have a critical tone, while those relating to the state controlled farms are the most hopeful.

Claims are advanced that the state owned farms cultivated nearly two and a quarter million acres in the 1929-1930 year and plans to sow and cultivate about ten million acres in 1930-1931. Production this year is stated to have amounted to the equivalent of thirty-six million bushels, to be raised next year to 158 millions.

Ambitious Program.

Cost of this production is figured in Russia at between 40 and 50 cents a bushel, including training and personnel expense and amortization. The magnitude of this tremendous experiment in corporate, government financed agriculture may be gleaned from the statement that the project will need next year 88,000 trained workers, of whom 65,000 are to be tractor drivers. Tractors needed will reach 593,000 horsepower.

Such figures are staggering, but a little investigation of their meaning shows that if all the cost of production was divided among the 88,000 permanently employed laborers, there would be only $700 each. On any sane basis of accounting it is more than likely that the labor will have to exist, trained though it may be, on an average of not more than $6 a week per capita.

In most of the notes being sent out by the department of commerce, it is seen that even the official Russian publications are not wholly convinced about the ultimate success of the ambitious program. The state farms are fighting against inefficient labor, against delays in sending along tractors and parts, against poor fuel for the motor equipment and—this has a familiar sound—against interference and delays caused by investigating communist party commissions.

Lack of Coal.

Troubles in farming are minor, however, compared to those in coal. The planned production has never been met and stood during August in the Donetz basin at only 69 per cent of the estimate. In July 25,000 miners quit the mines. Izvestia states that the whole industrial program of soviet factories has been held up by the lack of coal.

From the tone of the articles, it can be seen that grain growing operations have been more successful in Russian government activities than manufacturing. One guess is as good as another about the intentions of the soviets as to their wheat. They desire to trade it off in the world market for manufactures they are not equipped to make. It is conceivable that they would like to see wheat prices in other countries depressed now so that when their 158 million bushels are ready for sale next year there will not be too much competition from American and Canadian growers.

SEPT. GIVES NO CLEW TO TRADE DURING AUTUMN

Action of Markets Doesn't Help.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 21.—It cannot fairly be said that the markets and the state of general business in the third week of September necessarily indicates what the whole autumn season will disclose.

In that month in 1924, on the eve of the great industrial revival, daily business on the stock exchange averaged hardly three quarters of a million shares; stock market prices lost ground; there was little indication of the outburst of financial enthusiasm which was then only two months away. Nevertheless, wheat was rising on the positive news of foreign crop failure and steel production was visibly speeding up. It is the purely negative or distinctly disappointing character of the incidents thus far in the present month which has attracted most attention.

Face Income Reports.

Probably this unfavorable impression arises in large degree from the fact that this month's markets had to face the cold statistical reports for August, the month in which depres-

When a manufacturer's hour of need tested the personal, energetic service of his bank

HOW could he ask for additional bank credit? Very evidently his business lacked sufficient operating capital.

Still he informed his bank, The Northern Trust Company, that his business was actually earning a fair manufacturing profit.

Obviously there was trouble somewhere.

Going over his affairs with him the banking officers discovered what it was. It lay in the too rapid amortization of his deceased partner's interest.

At the management's suggestion, men of The Northern presented the facts to the heirs—persuaded each that a revision of the amortization agreement would actually work to his advantage.

Frequent and frank discussions gradually developed the basis for a new, workable arrangement. The business was relieved of financial pressure. It regained its position in the field.

Today its balance sheet is highly satisfactory—equally attractive to the management, the bank and the heirs of the deceased partner.

What matches personal banking for getting things done?

The Northern Trust Company in its banking relations seeks to find and to perform any task which will further the prosperity of its clients.

You find among its officers an intimate knowledge of your type of business. Quickly they become acquainted with you, take a real interest in you and in your financial affairs. Organization is compact. Officers are easily accessible. You get things done.

To heads of business and to other men and women who sense the advantage of personal banking, this is an invitation to bring your business where that type of banking has been a watchword for many years.

At The Northern Trust Company's home on the Northwest corner of La Salle and Monroe Streets, an officer will be glad to confer with you. Or an appointment can be arranged in your own office.

This, like other stories told in the advertisements of The Northern Trust Company, is an experience true in all its essential facts. Because of the confidential nature of The Northern Trust Company's banking and trust relationships, identities and personal details are always disguised
